CHAUCER

THE SQUIRE'S

TALE

POLLARD PRESENTED TO THE UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO
BY

[Signature]

C. Copp Clark Company
Examination copies of the accompanying Book have just reached us from the Publishers. We have pleasure in sending one to your address.

THE COPP, CLARK COMPANY, LIMITED

9 Front St. West, TORONTO
THE SQUIRE'S TALE
CONTENTS.

Introduction, - - - - - - - - - vii
The Squire's Tale, - - - - - - - - - 1
Notes, - - - - - - - - - - - 26
Grammar, - - - - - - - - - 40
Glossary, - - - - - - - - - 43
INTRODUCTION.

Though so great a master of narrative poetry, Chaucer seems to have been far from proficient in inventing a plot. The merest outline of a story by another writer sufficed him, and with this given he could expand and modify, imparting fresh life to the characters, and adding humorous or dramatic touches with the utmost success. But to invent a story out of his own head seems to have been beyond him. The Dethe of Blaunche the Duchesse, and his charming and playful poem, The Parlement of Foules, are sketches too slight to be reckoned exceptions. In Anelida and Fals Arcyte he tried to work some of Boccaccio’s materials from the Teseide into a new story of his own, and left a mere fragment of some three hundred lines. In the Hous of Fame, under the influence of Dante, he set out to compose a new Vision, and again was unable to carry out his plan. In the majority of the Canterbury Tales his work of translation, adaptation, or expansion can be easily traced by the help of the “Originals and Analogues,” published by the Chaucer Society. The genesis of the Squire’s Tale has baffled investigation more than any other, and the fact that it is unfinished, that the six hundred lines which we possess leave us... still at the threshold of the story, suggests that we are here in presence of one of Chaucer's rare attempts at a more or less original plot. He seems, if we may hazard a guess, to have heard or read several Eastern tales, and to have formed the ambitious project of combining them into a single story, which would have required many thousand lines for its proper development. When his invention began to fail him he set down, as if by way of notes for his own future use, some of the incidents which this great romance was to contain, and it is worth while, with the help of these lines and some earlier passages, to realize for ourselves how vast the story was to be.

(i.) It was to tell us something of the Tartar King, Cambiuscan, and of his conquests (ll. 661-63).

(ii.) The King of Araby and Ind sends Cambiuscan on his birthday feast two magic gifts for himself, a horse of brass and a miraculous sword, and two for his daughter Canacee, a mirror which would disclose any treason in war or love, and a ring enabling the wearer to understand the speech of birds. All these gifts would have to be used in the course of the story.

(iii.) By the help of her ring Canacee converses with a falcon who has been deserted by her love, and the story was to tell how by the aid of Canacee's younger brother, Cambalus (or Cambalo), this falcon—perhaps an enchanted princess—"gat hire love ageyn" (ll. 654-56).

(iv.) Canacee's other brother, Algarsyf, the eldest son of Cambiuscan, after great dangers, through which he is to be helped by the horse of brass, is to win for wife a lady named Theodera (ll. 663-66).

(v.) Another Cambalo is to fight in the lists with
INTRODUCTION

Canacee's two brothers, Cambalo and Algarsyf, and to win Canacee as his prize.

Thus we are promised three distinct love stories, with the conquering career of Cambiuscan as a background to them, and the use of the magic gifts as a connecting link. In the first six hundred lines Chaucer introduces some of the characters, describes the magic gifts, brings the first love story up to the point at which the tale begins, and then leaves us! Two centuries and a half later Milton in Il Penseroso longed for the power to

"Call up him that left half told
The story of Cambuscan bold,
Of Camball and of Algarsife,
And who had Canacee to wife,
That own'd the vertuous ring and glass,
And of the wondrous hors of brass
On which the Tartar King did ride."

It was a pious wish, but in speaking of the story as "half told," Milton used a poet's license. It was hardly begun!

Whence did Chaucer obtain the materials for this story so unlike anything else he wrote? It is possible to guess, though this is all. Prof. Brandl has pointed out (Engl. Studien, xii. 163) that in 1385-86 Leo VI., the last King of Armenia (he died an exile in Paris in 1393), was staying in London. It is possible that it was from one of his followers that Chaucer obtained his Eastern lore. Armenia was favourably situated for the development of such a story. It had suffered many things at the hands of Greeks and Mongols, Turks and Persians. Armenian writers took the later Greek and Byzantine authors as their models; Greek romances would be familiar to them, and they could not be ignorant of the stories of magic that abounded in Persia and the East. The names in the Squire's Tale are in keeping with such a mixed origin. Canacee is the Greek Κανάκη, Theodera the Greek Θεόδωρα. On the other hand, Cambiuscan himself is the famous Chingis (or Genghis) Khan, the title assumed by the great Mongol prince, Temujin; while Cambalo has its origin in Kambala, the name of one of his descendants. As for the names Algarsyf and Elpheta no one, as far as I know, has yet suggested an origin for them, but they are certainly not Greek, and do not appear to be Mongol. One other point may be noted. In ll. 663-64 Chaucer writes:

"And after wol I speke of Algarsyf,
How that he wan Theodera to his wif."

This is the only mention of Theodera, and without pressing the point unduly, it may certainly be said that she is introduced as if the readers or hearers of the story would know who she was. If we suppose Chaucer to be retelling in his own way a story or stories which others beside himself might have heard at the English court, the familiarity of this reference would be explained.

In our inability to discover the direct original (or originals) from which Chaucer borrowed, we have to fall back on the fact that no old story is really unique. There is always something else like it, and by the aid of such "analogues" we may at least learn the kind of materials for such a tale which were in existence in Chaucer's day.

(i.) To take first the historical setting of the story,
we must remember that the careers of the great Tartar conquerors of the thirteenth century, and the habits of their people, were well known in Chaucer’s day. Ambassadors, mostly Franciscan friars, from the Pope and the King of France, had visited the Tartar Courts, and like modern travellers on their return had written of what they saw and heard. Thus there is the Historia Mongolorum of the Franciscan Carpini who went an embassy to Tartary in 1245, and whose narrative (with that of the Dominican Simon de St. Quentin who visited a Tartar general in Persia) was freely used by Vincent de Beauvais (d. 1264) in his Speculum Historiale, or “Mirror of History,” one of the best known of medieval compilations. In 1253-54 there was another Franciscan ambassador, William de Rubruquis, and later in the century Friar Ricold of Monte Croce, and the two expeditions of the brothers Nicolo and Maffeo Polo. On the second of these (1271-95) Nicolo took with him his son, Marco Polo (d. 1324), whose account of their travels and of the Court of Kublai Kaan is one of the famous books of the world. To these we must add the Liber de Tartaris of Hayton, an Armenian prince who died at Poitiers in 1308, and the travels of the Franciscan Odoric of Pordenone (d. 1331). From the works of the last two of these, and various other books, that first of arm-chair travellers, the ingenious compiler who wrote under the name of Sir John Mandeville, made up the Travels which in Chaucer’s day were accessible both in French and Latin, and perhaps in English also. Most of these authors naturally dwell on the enlightened monarch, Kublai Kaan, who ruled at Cambaluc (Kaanbaligh = the city of the Kaan, the modern Pekin) during the second half of the thirteenth century, but they tell also of the founder of the Mongol empire, the ferocious Temujin (1162-1227), who in 1206 took the name Chingis, or Genghis Khan (very mighty ruler), which through the forms Canjus- or Camiuscan (the latter being used by Friar Ricold) becomes Chaucer's Camybus- or Cambynscan,¹ and Milton's Cambúscan. In almost any of them also may be found an account of the Kaan's birthday feast, and allusions to the strange foods eaten by the Tartars, the two distinctive bits of local colour in the Squire's Tale, as contrasted with the other details about the king and his court which have nothing individual about them. Dr. Skeat, however, like Mr. Keightley before him, finding that these two points are mentioned by Marco Polo, has argued that therefore Marco Polo must have been Chaucer's authority for them. Starting from this theory he has quoted a number of parallel passages in which the coincidences seem no stronger than would naturally arise in two favourable descriptions of a medieval prince, and has rather unkindly suggested that when Chaucer speaks of Sarray he is really thinking of Cambaluc, when he describes Genghis Khan he is thinking of his grandson Kublai, and that, though Kambala was the name of a Tartar prince, the Cambalo, or Cambalus, in the Squire's Tale is taken from the name of the city Cambaluc floating in Chaucer's brain.

¹This derivation of Cambuscan from Chinghiz Khan was first pointed out by Sir Henry Yule in his edition of Marco Polo. In the Harleian and five others of the MSS. of the Canterbury Tales the form used is Cambynscan, but in the Ellesmere MS., now generally adopted as a text, it is said more to resemble Cambyuscan, and as this is in itself more correct, and has been popularized by Milton's (wrongly accented) Cambúscan, it is here adopted.
A very able paper, by Prof. J. M. Manley, demonstrates the needlessness of Prof. Skeat’s theory, which has introduced fresh complications into an already complicated story. My own belief is that, though we may illustrate the Squire’s Tale from these old accounts of Tartary, and especially from Marco Polo, because he has been so well edited by Colonel Yule, there is very little probability that Chaucer consulted any of them.

It is much more likely that he found these details where he found more important parts of his story, i.e. in some lost romance. But if we must suppose that he provided his own local colour, we have no right to pin him down to using Marco Polo to the exclusion of other easily accessible authorities.

(ii.) The description of the horse of brass is an important feature in the fragment of the Squire’s Tale which we possess, and we are told that it was by aid of the wonderful beast that the Kaan’s son, Algarsyf, won his bride Theodera. For a similar story to this we need go no farther than the tale of the Ebony Horse in the Arabian Nights, which may be briefly summarized.

At the feast of the Nevrouz, or new day, which is the first of the year and of spring, strangers came to the Persian Court to show their inventions, and receive

2 There are some features in these narratives, e.g. the account of the gorgeous dresses worn at the Kaan’s feast, which Chaucer with his love of colour could hardly have helped reproducing if he had known them.

3 It should, perhaps, be stated that it is said to be correct to adopt the spelling Kaan for the emperor, the minor chiefs being called Khans.
rewards for them. One year three sages appear, the first of whom brings a golden peacock which marks the time by flapping its wings; the second a golden man who blows a trumpet at the approach of enemies; the third a sculptured horse, saddled and bridled, by which he can transport himself where he will through the air. Each sage asks the hand of one of the king's daughters, and the owner of the horse being ugly, the third princess objects. At his father's request the king's son examines the horse. He mounts it, turns the peg in its neck, and is carried away before he has learnt the secret how to control the beast he has set in motion. After a long journey he finds a smaller peg in the horse's ear, and the animal descends to earth near the palace of a princess, the daughter of the King of Yemen. The prince makes her acquaintance. He is surprised by her father, offers to fight his whole army, confronts it, and then flies away on the magic horse. Returning, he carries off the princess to his home, but leaves her a little distance off that he may warn his parents of her approach. Then the third sage, the owner of the horse, finds her and carries her off. After some adventures the princess falls into the hands of another king, and to escape his attentions feigns madness. The prince disguises himself as a physician, offers to cure her, and is brought into her presence with this object. The lovers then mount the magic horse together and make their escape.

Now, though the Arabian Nights were not known in Europe in Chaucer's day as a collection, this particular story had reached France a century before he wrote, and forms the plot of the romance of Cléomadès, written about 1285, by Adenès le Roi, a minstrel of Brabant, who may have learnt it from Blanche of France, widow of the Spanish Infante. The romance may be summarized as follows:

Cléomadès is the son of Ynabele, daughter of the King of Spain, and of Marcadigas, a Sardinian prince. One day three kings arrive at Seville, while Marcadigas is celebrating his birthday feast, bringing gifts with which to woo his three daughters. Melocandis, King of Barbary, offers a man of gold who blows a trumpet whenever treason is near. Baldigano, of Morocco, offers a golden hen and three chickens which run about and clap their wings; while the hideous Crumpart, King of Bugia (in North Africa), brings a large horse of ebony which will carry its rider fifty leagues through the air in an hour. A long account of Virgil and his skill in magic (cf. Squire's Tale, l. 231 and note) follows the description of these gifts. The other daughters of Marcadigas are content with their suitors, but the youngest, Maxima, implores her brother, Cléomadès, to protect her from King Crumpart. Cléomadès depreciates the horse, and is bidden by Crumpart to try it. He mounts without knowing the secret of how to stop it, and is instantly carried away through the air. At last he finds the second peg, alights on the roof of a lofty tower, and entering the house sees a lovely maiden with whom he falls in love. Her father, Carmant, King of Tuscany, seeks to kill him, but he escapes on his horse, speedily returns, and carries the princess to Seville. He thinks it necessary to warn his parents of her arrival, and in his absence the wicked Crumpart persuades the princess to mount the horse, jumps up behind her, and carries her off. They alight at Salermo, and are seized by its King, Meniadus. Crumpart dies, the princess feigns madness, and Cléomadès rescues her as in the Arabian Nights.¹

These rough summaries should make it equally evident that Chaucer did not work directly from these particular versions, and that he did work from some other version of the same story. As for Chaucer's horse being of brass and not of ebony, a steed of brass occurs in the story of the Third Kalendar in the Arabian Nights; men of brass in the romance of Huon of Bordeaux beat iron flails before a giant's gateway so that none may enter, and the famous talking head of Friar Bacon was also, according to the legend, of brass.

As for the magic mirror, Mr. Clouston, to whose essay on the "Magical Elements in the Squire's Tale" (Chaucer Society, 1888) I must continue to be indebted, reminds us that the Cup of Zamshid, a legendary Persian king, enabled its owner to observe all that was passing in the world; in the Romance of Reynard the Fox, a mirror of more limited reflection, "of suche vertu that men myght see therein all that was don within a myle," is among the treasures in Reynard's pretended hoard, and Gower in his Confessio Amantis writes:

```
Whan Romē stood in noble plight
Virgile, which was tho parfight,
A mirrour made, of his clergye,
And sette it in the tounēs yē,
Of marbre on a piller withoute,
That they, by thrittie mile aboute,
```

¹ In a third version, a Turkish story, which, in some editions of the Arabian Nights, takes the place of that first quoted, instead of three sages there is only a single inventor, an Indian, who brings the magic horse, and plays the same part as Crumpart and the third sage.
By day and eke also by nighte,
In that mirroure beholdë mighte
Here enemies, if eny were,
With all here ordenaunce there
Which they ayein the citee caste.

* Tho, then; parfight, perfect; clergye, magic skill; ye, eye; marbre, marble; here, their; ayein, against.

To illustrate the virtues of the magic ring Mr. Clouston has collected numerous stories of rings which conferred on their owners power over demons and genii, as was the case with Solomon's (cp. note to l. 131), immunity from poison, invisibility, the power of gaining love, or boundless wealth. But the only ring with this exact property of rendering the language of birds intelligible is one mentioned in a German story¹ in which

"A prince comes to a castle where all the people are fast asleep (enchanted?); and in a hall of the castle he finds a table on which lay a golden ring, and this inscription was on the table: 'Whosoever puts this ring in his mouth shall understand the language of birds.' He afterwards puts the ring in his mouth, and by understanding what three crows are saying one to another is saved from death."

Incidents involving the power of understanding or conversing with beasts and birds are, of course, common in fairy tales, especially in those of Eastern origin.

As to the magic sword, Mr. Clouston has the following note:

"Telephus, the son of Hercules and Auge, was wounded by Achilles with his spear, and healed by the application of the same weapon. Petronius, in his epigram, De Telepho, exactly describes the qualities of Cambyuskan's magic sword—

Unde datum est vulnus, contigit inde salus.²"

¹ From Wolff's Deutsche Hausmarchen, quoted by Mr. J. G. Frazer in a paper on "The Language of Animals" in the Archaeological Review, i. 163.

² Thence, whence the wound was given, healing comes.
"A somewhat similar sword was possessed by a giant in a Norse tale—'whoever is touched with its point dies instantly; but if he is touched with the hilt he immediately returns to life' (Thorpe's Yule-Tide Stories, 1853, p. 162). And in another Norse tale (Dasent's Tales from the Fjords) a witch gives the hero a sword, one edge of which was black, the other white. If he smote a foe with the black edge he fell dead in a moment, but by striking him with the white edge the dead man as quickly rose up alive."

These parallels, which the industry of Mr. Clouston has collected, show that the magic gifts which Chaucer introduces in the Squire's Tale were part of the common property of Eastern story-tellers, while the stories of the magic horse show how the most important of them was used by other romancers. But, whereas in other versions the use of the other gifts is merely perfunctory (confined in fact to the golden man blowing his horn when the prince mounts the horse without fully knowing its secret), in Chaucer the ring seems meant to be as important as the horse itself, and as he introduces four gifts instead of three, he probably intended to bring the third and fourth into play as well as the first two. He also adds, as we have seen, other developments, so that the tale, if it had ever been completed, must have been immensely complicated. It is certain that Chaucer must have had at least one earlier story from which to work. It seems highly probable that he had more than one, and that he tried to combine them on too ambitious a scale. So far as the fragment goes it is written in his best and easiest style, and this with the "note of time" in l. 73, 1 in which the narrator shows his anxiety not to take up more than his fair share of 1 Prime (see the Shipman's Tale, ll. 1395-96) was the usual dinner hour, so "I wol not taryen you, for it is pryme" may have had a very special meaning.

the pilgrim’s time, proves that the tale was written somewhere about 1388, when the scheme of the Canterbury Tales was already well started, and Chaucer’s powers were at their highest.*

It only remains to add that two attempts have been made to complete this “half-told” tale. The first of these is contained in Canto ii., st. 30—end of Canto iii. of Book iv. of Spenser’s Faery Queene (published in 1596). Here, not very happily, Spenser makes three brothers, Priamond, Dyamond, and Triamond, “borne at one burden in one happie morne” of the fay Agape, fight with Cambalo to gain the hand of Canacee. Canacee lends Cambalo her ring,

> “That ’mongst the manie vertues which we reed,
> Had power to staunch al wounds that mortally did bleed,” an extension of the virtues attributed to the ring by Chaucer (ll. 153-55), for which Spenser had no authority.

By the help of the ring Cambalo kills Priamond and Dyamond, but is reconciled to Triamond by the mediation of their sister Cambina, whom he marries.

The second continuation was written by a very minor poet, a certain John Lane, about 1616, and revised by him in 1630. Both versions exist in manuscript, and that of 1616, with the later variations shown as footnotes, was printed in 1888 by the Chaucer Society. Lane introduces all Chaucer’s characters, and carries out his complicated plot in all its ramifications, though not always according to the plan which Chaucer sketched out. We need not follow out these differences, for the poem is very poor stuff, and it is almost a pity it has been preserved to demand notice. But Lane was a friend of Milton’s father, and it is possible that it may have been due to this friendship that Milton inserted in Il Penseroso the reference to Chaucer already quoted. A still nobler reference (not seriously marred by the mistake which treats the conclusion to the Squire's Tale as having been written and lost) preludes Spenser's continuation, and to quote it will give a pleasant ending to this Introduction.

*See Birch—Cleary’s Irony* (To Ph.D Thesis).

"Whylome, as antique stories tellen us,
Those two\(^1\) were foes the fellonest on ground,
And battell made the dreddest daungerous
That ever shrilling trumpet did resound;
Though now their acts be nowhere to be found,
As that renowned Poet them compyled
With warlike numbers and Heroicke sound,
Dan Chaucer, well of English undefyled,
On Fames eternall beadroll worthie to be fyled.

"But wicked Time, that all good thoughts doth waste,
And workes of noblest wits to nought outweare,
That famous moniment hath quite defaste,
And robd the world of threasure endlessse deare,
The whiche mote have enriched all us heare.
O cursed Eld! the cankerworme of writs,
How may these rimes, so rude as doth appeare,
Hope to endure, sith workes of heavenly wits
Are quite devourd, and brought to nought by little bits?

"Then pardon, O most sacred happie spirit!
That I thy labours lost may thus revive,
And steale from thee the meede of thy due merit,
That none durst ever whilst thou wast alive,
And being dead in vaine yet many strive:
Ne dare I like; but, through infusion sweete
Of thine owne spirit which doth in me survive,
I follow here the footing of thy feete,
That with thy meaning so I may the rather meete."

(F.Q. iv. 2. xxxii.-xxxiv.)

\(^1\) "Couragious Cambell and stout Triamond."
INTRODUCTION

NOTE.—The text of this edition is taken from the Ellesmere Manuscript (E.), collated with the Harleian (H.), Cambridge (C.), Hengwrt (Heng.), Corpus (Corp.), Petworth (P.), and Lansdowne (L.), all as printed by the Chaucer Society. The reading of the Ellesmere manuscript is departed from in the following cases, of which those marked with an asterisk are the more important.

17. as, E. and.
61. * solempne, E.P. so sol-empne.
62. ne, E.H. om.
86. spoke, E.C. spoken.
96. come, E.C. comen.
123. whan, E. whan that.
138. on, E. in.
144. to, E.C. unto.
158. kerve, E.hym kerve.
160. the stroke, E. a stroke.
162. thilke, E.C. that.
165. stroke, E.C. strike.
173. to, E. unto.
178. the, E.C. this.
184. or, E. ne.
200. goon, E. go.
201. of fairye, E. and Heng. a fairye, C. as fayre.
201. the peple, E.C. al to. peple.
207. seyden it, E. seyde that it.
217. for it, E. it.
232. speke, E.C. spaken.
262. his, E. and Heng. the.
275. up on, E.C. up in.
283. over, E.C. of.
298. yow, E.C. me.
217. telle yow, E.C. and Heng. yow telle.
322. ther-in, E.C. ther.
326. ne, E. and Heng. nor.
338. ful...doughty, E.C. ful, omitting doughty.
351. seyde that it, E.C. seyde it.
377. is, E. om.
416. as, E.C. om.
421. he, E.P. she.
436. answere, E. answeren.
449. this, E. the.
463. compassioun, E. passioun.
469. grete, E. the grete.
472. yet moore, E.C. moore yet.
484. that, E. om.
489. to, E. om.
491. chastysed, E. and Heng. chasted.
499. ther, E.C. that.
510. * no wight, E.C. I ne; C. I notwitha word scratched out.
520. this, E. the.
535. in change of, E. in change for.
The readings as stille as for stille as in l. 174, the second this in l. 266, the second the in l. 291, wondred for wondreden, wondren) in l. 307, the by in l. 330, and the reading seme for to seme in l. 394 have the authority of the Harleian MS. only.

Other Harleian readings worth considering, but not adopted in the text, are: omission of ther in l. 203; of hir in l. 368, of she in l. 370, of more in l. 429, of for in l. 492, and of propre in l. 610, also slake for awake in l. 476.

The reading thurghout for thurgh in l. 46, and the and before fresh in l. 622 are supported by the Hengwr MS. only.

Nas nevere yet no man in l. 423 is supported by Harley and Corpus against nas never man yet, and nas nevere yit man of the other five MSS.; al before my thoght in l. 533, by Harley, Cambridge, and Lansdowne against the other four MSS.

See also notes on lines 20, 105, 114, 171, 239, 419, 515, and 602.

A. W. P.
THE CANTERBURY TALES

SQUIRE’S TALE

[Words of the Host to the Squire]

‘Squier, come neer, if it your willé be,
And sey somwhat of love; for certès ye Konnen theron as muché as any man.’

‘Nay, sire,’ quod he, ‘but I wol seye as I kan
With hertly wyl,—for I wol nat rebelle Agayn youre lust. A talé wol I telle.
Have me excuséd, if I speke amys;
My wyl is good, and lo, my tale is this.’

Here bigynneth the Squieres Tale

At Sarray, in the land of Tartarye,
Ther dwelte a kyng that werreyéd Russye,
Thurgh which ther dydē many a doughty man.
This noble kyng was clepéd Cambyuskan,
Which in his tyme was of so greet renoun
That ther was nowher in no regioun
So excellent a lord in allē thyng.'
Hym lakkèd noght that longed to a kyng;
As of the secte of which that he was born
He kepte his lay, to which that he was sworn;
And therto he was hardy, wys, and riche,
Pitous and just, and evermore yliche;
Sooth of his word, benigne and honourable,
Of his coráge as any centre stable;
Yong, fressh, and strong, in armés desirous
As any bacheler of al his hous.
A fair persone he was, and fortunat,
And kepte alwey so wel roial estat
That ther was nowher swich another man.

This noble kyng, this Tartre Cambyuskan,
Haddé two sones on Elpheta his wyf,
Of whiche the eldeste highté Algarsyf;
That oother sone was clepéd Cambalo.
A doghter hadde this worthy kyng also
That yongest was, and highté Canacee,
But for to tellé yow al hir beautee
It lyth nat in my tonge, nyn my konnyng;
I dar nat undertake so heigh a thyng;
Myn English eek is insufficient;
It mosté been a rethor excellent,
That koude his colours longynge for that art,
If he sholde hire discryven every part;
I am noon swich, I moot speke as I kan,

And so bifel that whan this Cambyuskan
Hath twenty wynter born his diademe,
As he was wont fro yeer to yeer, I deme,
He leet the feeste of his nativitee
Doon cryen thurghout Sarray his citee,
The last Idus of March after the yeer.

Phebus, the sonne, ful joly was and cleer,
For he was neigh his exaltacioun
In Martès face, and in his mansioun
In Aries, the colerik hooté signe.
Ful lusty was the weder and benigné,
For which the foweles agayn the sone sheene,
What for the sesoun and the yongé grene,
Ful loudé songen hire affeccioouns,
Hem semed han geten hem protecciouns
Agayn the swerd of wynter, keene and coold.

This Cambyuskan—of which I have yow tooold—
In roial vestiment sit on his deys,
With diademe, ful heighe in his paleys,
And halt his feeste solemne and so ryché,
That in this world ne was ther noon it lyche;
Of which, if I shal tellen al tharray,
Thanne wolde it occupie a someres day;
And eek it nedeth nat for to devyse
At every curs the ordre of hire servyse.
I wol nat tellen of hir strangé sewes,
Ne of hir swannes, ne of hire heronsewes.
Eek in that lond, as tellen knyghtés olde,
Ther is som mete that is ful deynte holde
That in this lond men recche of it but smal;
Ther nys no man that may reporten al.

I wol nat taryen yow, for it is pryme,
And for it is no fruyt, but los of tyme;
Unto my firste I wolde have my recours.
And so bifel that after the thriddé cours,
Whil that this kyng sit thus in his nobleye,
Herknynge his mynstralés hir thyngés pleye
Biforn hym at the bord deliciously,
In at the hallé dore, al sodeynly,
Ther cam a knyght upon a steede of bras,
And in his hand a brood mirour of glas;
Upon his thombe he hadde of gold a ring,
And by his syde a naked sword hangyng;
And up he rideth to the heighe bord.
In al the hallé ne was ther spoke a word,
For merveille of this knyght; hym to biholde
Ful bisily ther wayten yonge and olde.
This strange knyght that cam thus sodeynly,
Al arméd, save his heed, ful richely,
Saleweth kyng and queene, and lordés alle,
By ordre, as they seten in the halle,
With so heigh reverence and obeisaunce,
As wel in speche as in contenaunce,
That Gawayn, with his oldé curteisye,
Though he were come ageyn out of fairye,
Ne koude hym nat amendé with a word;
And after this, biforn the heighé bord,
He with a manly voysseyde his message
After the forme uséd in his langage,
Withouten vice of silable, or of lettre;
And for his talé sholdé seme the bettre,
Accordant to his wordés was his cheere,
As techeth art of speche hem that it leere.
Ál be that I kan nat sowne his stile,
Ne kan nat clymben over so heigh a style,
Yet seye I this, as to commune entente,
Thus muche amounteth al that ever he mente,
If it so be that I have it in mynde.

He seyde, 'The kyng of Arabie and of Inde, My ligë lord, on this solempné day
Saleweth yow, as he best kan and may,
And sendeth yow, in honour of youre feeste,
By me, that am al redy at youre heeste,
This steede of bras, that esily and weel
Kan in the space of o day natureel,—
This is to seyn, in foure and twenty houres,— Wher so yow lyst, in droghte or ellës shoures,
Beren youre body into every place
To which youre hertë wilneth for to pace,
Withouten wem of yow, thurgh foul or fair;
Or, if yow lyst to flee as hye in the air
As dooth an egle whan hym list to soore,
This same steede shal bere yow ever moore,
Withouten harm, til ye be ther yow leste,
Though that ye slepen on his bak, or reste;
And turne ageyn with writhyng of a pyn.
He that it wroghtë koudë ful many a pyn.
He wayted many a constellacioun
Er he had doon this operacioun,
And knew ful many a seel, and many a bond.

'This mirrour eek, that I have in myn hond, Hath swich a myght that men may in it see Whan ther shal fallen any adversitee
Unto youre regne, or to youreself also,
And openly who is youre freend or foo;
And over al this, if any lady bright
Hath set hire herte on any maner wight,
If he be fals she shal his tresoun see,
His newe love, and al his subtilee,
So openly that ther shal no thyng hyde.
Wherfore, ageyn this lusty someres tyde,
This mirour and this ryng that ye may see
He hath sent to my lady Canacee, Youre excellenté doghter that is heere.

'The vertu of the ryng, if ye wol heere,
Is this, that if hire lust it for to were Upon hir thombe, or in hir purs it bere,
Ther is no fowel that fleeth under the hevene
That she ne shal wel understonde his stevene,
And knowe his menyng openly and pleyn,
And answere hym in his langage ageyn;
And every gras that groweth upon roote
She shal eek knowe and whom it wol do boote,
Al be his woundës never so depe and wyde.

'This naked swerd that hangeth by my syde
Swich vertu hath that what man so ye Smyte, Thurghout his armure it wol kerve and byte,
Were it as thikke as is a branchëd ook;
And what man that is wounded with the strook
Shal never be hool, til that yow list of grace
To stroke hym with the plat in thilké place
Ther he is hurt; this is as muche to seyn,
Ye mootë with the plattë swerd ageyn
Stróke hym in the wounde and it wol close.
This is a verray sooth, withouten glose,
It failleth nat whil it is in youre hoold.'

And whan this knyght hath thus his talé toold,
He rideth out of halle, and doun he lighte.
His steedé, which that shoon as sonne brighte, 170
Stant in the court as stille as any stoon.
This knyght is to his chambré lad anoon,
And is unarméd and to mete y-set.

The presentes been ful roially y-fct,—
This is to seyn, the swerd and the mirour,— 175
And born anon into the heighé tour,
With certeine officers ordeyned therfore;
And unto Canacee the ryng was bore
Solempnély, ther she sit at the table;
But sikerly, withouten any fable,

The hors of bras, that may nat be remewed,
It stant as it were to the ground y-glewed;
Ther may no man out of the place it dryve
For noon engyn of wyndas or polyve;
And causé why? for they kan nat the craft; 185
And therfore in the place they han it laft,
Til that the knyght hath taught hem the manere
To voyden hym, as ye shal after heere.

Greet was the prees that swarmeth to and fro
To gauren on this hors that stondeth so; 190
For it so heigh was, and so brood and long,
So wel proportioned for to been strong,
Right as it were a steede of Lumbardye;
Ther-withe so horsly, and so quyk of eye,
As it a gentil Poillesys courser were; 195
For certès, fro his tayl unto his ere,
Nature ne art ne koude hym nat amende
In no degree, as al the peple wende.
But evermoore hir moosté wonder was How that it koude goon, and was of bras!
It was of fairye, as the peple semed.
Diversé folk diversély they demed;
As many heddes as manye wittes ther been.
They murmureden as dooth a swarm of bèn,
And maden skiles after hir fantasies,
Rehersynge of thiše oldé poetries;
And seyden it was lyk the Pegasee,
The hors that hadde wyngës for to flee
Or elles it was the Grekës hors, Synoun,
That broghté Troïe to destruccioun,
As men may in thiše oldé geestés rede.

‘Myn herte,’ quod oon, ‘is evermooré in drede;
I trowe,som men of armës been ther-inne,
That shapen hem thiç citee for to wynne;
It were right good that al swich thyng were knowe.’

Another rownéd to his felawe lowe,
And seyde, ‘He lyeth! for it is rather lyk
An apparence, y-maad by som magyk;
As jogelours pleyen at thiç feestés grete.’
Of sondry doubtés thus they jangle and trete,
As lewed peple demeth comunly
Of thyngës that been maad moore subtilly
Than they kan in hir lewednesse comprehende,
They demen gladly to the badder ende.

And somme of hem wondred on the mirour
That born was up into the maistre tour,
How men myghte in it swiché thyngès se.
Another answerde and seyde it myghte wel be Naturally, by composiciouns
Of angles, and of slye reflexiouuns;
And seyden that in Romé was swich oon.
They speke of Alocen and Vitulon,
And Aristotle, that writen in hir lyves
Of queynté mirours, and of prospectives,
As knowen they that han hir bookès herd.

And oother folk han wondred on the swerd
That woldé percen thurghout every thyng;
And fille in speche of Thelophus the kyng,
And of Achilles for his queyntè spere,
For he koude with it bothé heele and dere,
Right in swich wise as men may with the swerd
Of which right now ye han youre-selven herd.
They speken of sondry hardyng of metal,
And speke of medicynés therewithal,
And how and whanne it sholde y-harded be,
Which is unknowé, algatès unto me.

Tho speeke they of Canacées ryng,
And seyden alle that swich a wonder thyng
Of craft of ryngés herde they never noon;
Save that he Moyses and kyng Salomon
Hadden a name of konnyng in swich art;
Thus seyn the peple and drawen hem apart.

But nathelesse somme seiden that it was Wonder to maken of fern-asshen glas,
And yet nys glas nat lyk asshen of fern,
But for they han i-knownen it so fern
Therfore cesseth hir janglyng and hir wonder.

As sooré wondren somme on cause of thonder,
On ebbe, on flood, on gossomer, and on myst,
And on alle thyng til that his cause is wyst,
Thus jangle they, and demen and devyse,
Til that the kyng gan fro the bord aryse.

Phebus hath laft the angle meridional,
And yet ascendynge was the beest roial,
The gentil Leon, with his Aldrian,
When that this Tartré kyng this Cambyuskan
Roos fro his bord, ther as he sat ful hye.
Toforn hym gooth the loudé mynstralcye
Til he cam to his chambre of parementz;
Ther as they sownen diverse instrumentz,
That is y-like an hevene for to heere.
Now dauncen lusty Venus children deere,
For in the Fyssh hir lady sat ful hye,
And looketh on hem with a freendly eye.

This noble kyng is set up on his trone;
This strange knyght is fet to hym ful soone,
And on the daunce he gooth with Canacee.

Heere is the revel and the jolitee
That is nat able a dul man to devyse;
(He moste han knownen love and his servyse,
And been a feestlych man, as fressh as May,
That sholdé yow devysen swich array)

Who koudé tellé yow the forme of daunces
So unkouthe, and so fresshé contenaunces,
Swich subtil lookyng and dissymulynges
For drede of jalouse mennes apercevynges?
No man but Launcelet, and he is deed.
Therefore I passe over all this lustiheed;
I sey namoore, but in this jolynesse
I lete hem til men to the soper dresse.

The styward byt the spices for to hye,
And eek the wyn, in al this melodye.
The usshers and the squiers been y-goon,
The spices and the wyn is come anoon.
They ete and drynke, and whan this hadde an ende,

Unto the temple, as reson was, they wende.

The service doon they soupen al by day;
What nedeth yow rehercen hire array?
Éch man woot wel that a kyngës feeste
Hath plentee to the mooste and to the leeste,
And deyntees mo than been in my knowyng.
At after soper gooth this noble kyng
To seen this hors of bras, with all the route
Of lordës and of ladyes hym aboute.
Swich wondryng was ther on this hors of bras
That syn the greté sege of Troïé was,— Ther as men wondred on an hors also,— Ne was ther swich a wondryng as was tho.
But fynally, the kyng axeth this knyght
The vertu of this courser, and the myght,
And preyëde hym to telle his governaunce.

This hors anoon bigan to trippe and daunce
Whan that this knyght leyde hand upon his reyne,
And seydë, 'Sire, ther is namoore to seyne,
But when you list to ride anywhere
Ye must tell me another where
Which I shall tell you between us two.
You must name him to what place also,
Or to what country, that you list to ride;
And when you come there as you list abide,
Bid him descend, and tell another there,
For there is the effect of all the kind,
And he will do as you please, and abide still.
Though all the world the contrary had sworn,
He shall not have been drawn nor bore;
Or, if you list bid him then be gone,
Trite this there, and he will vanish anon
Out of the sight of every man, and come again, be it by day or night,
When that you list to call him again,
In such a case as I shall to you say,
Between you and me, and that fully.
Ride when you list, there is no more to do.

Enformed when the king was of that knight,
And has conceived in his wit aright
The manner and the form of all this thing,
Ful glad and blithe is this noble doughty king
Repeireth to his revel as before.
The brydel is unto the tour y-born
And kept among his jewels leese and deer,
The hors vanished, I know in what manner,
Out of his sight,—you get no more of me;
But thus I let in lust and jolitee
This Cambyuskan his lordés festeiynge, Til wel ny the day bigan to sprynge.

[PART II]

The norice of digestioun, the sleepe,
Gan on hem wynke, and bad hem taken keepe
That muchel drynke and labour wolde han reste;
And with a galpyng mouth hem alle he keste,
And seyde, that it was tyme to lye adoun,
For blood was in his domynacioun.
‘Cherisseth blood, naturés freend,’ quod he.
They thanken hym galpynge, by two, by thre,
And every wight gan drawe hym to his reste,
As sleepe hem bad; they tooke it for the beste.
  Hire dremés shul nat been y-toold for me;
  Ful were hire heddes of fumositee,
  That causeth dreem, of which ther nys no charge.
They slepen til that it was prymé large,
The mooste part, but it were Canacee.
She was ful mesurable, as wommen be;
For of hir fader hadde she také leve
To goon to reste, soone after it was eve.
Hir listé nat appalléd for to be,
Ne on the morwe unfeestlich for to se,
And slepte hire firsté sleepe and thanne awook;
For swich a joyé she in hir berté took,
Bothe of hir queynte ryng and hire mirour,
That twenty tyme she changéd hir colour,
And in hire sleepe, right for impressioun
Of hire mirour, she hadde a visioun.
Wherfore er that the sonne gan up glyde
She cleped on hir maistresse hire bisyde,
And seyd that hire listë for to ryse.

Thise oldë wommen that 'been gladly wyse,
As is hire maistresse, anwerde hire anon,
And seyd, 'Madame, whider wil ye goon
Thus erly, for the folk been alle on reste?'
'I wol,' quod she, 'arisë,—for me lestë
No lenger for to slepe,—and walke aboutë.'

Hire maistresse clepeth wommen a greet route,
And up they rysen, wel a ten or twelve;
Up riseth fresshe Canacee hir-selve,
As rody and bright as dooth the yongë sonne
That in the Ram is foure degrees up ronne.
Noon hyer was he whan she redy was,
And forth she walketh esily a pas,
Arrayed after the lusty sesoun soote
Lightly, for to pleye and walke on foote,
Nat but with fyve or sixe of hir meyne,
And in a trench, forth in the park, gooth she.
The vapour, which that fro the erthë glood,
Madë the sonne semë rody and brood,
But nathëles it was so fair a sightë
That it made alle hire hertës for to lightë,—
What for the sesoun, and the morwenynge,
And for the foweles that she herdë synge;
For right anon she wistë what they mente
Right by hir song, and knew al hire entente.
The knotté why that every tale is toold,
If it be taried til that lust be coold
Of hem that han it after herkned yoore,
The savour passeth ever lenger the moore,
For fulsomnesse of his prolixitee;

And by the samé resoun thynketh me,
I sholdé to the knotté condescende
And maken of hir walkyng soone an ende.

Amydde a tree fordrye, as whit as chalk,
As Canacee was pleyyng in hir walk,
Ther sat a faucon over hire heed ful hye,
That with a pitous voys so gan to crye
That all the wode resounèd of hire cry.

Y-beten hath she hir-self so pitously
With bothe hir wyngês til the redé blood
Ran endélong the tree ther as she stood,
And ever in oon she cryde alwey and shrighte,
And with hir beek hir-selven so she prighte,
That ther nys tygre noon, ne cruwel beest,
That dwelleth outher in wode or in forest,
That nolde han wept, if that he wepe koude,
For sorwe of hire, she shrighte alwey so loude;
For ther nas never yet no man on lyve,—
If that I koude a faucon wel discryve,—
That herde of swich another of fairnesse,
As wel of plumage as of gentillesse
Of shape, and al that myghte y-rekened be.
A faucon peregryn thanne seméd she
Of fremdé land, and evermoore, as she stood,
She swowneth now and now for lakke of blood,
Til wel neigh is she fallen fro the tree.
This faire kynges doghter, Canacee,
That on hir fynger baar the queynté ryng,
Thurgh which she understood wel every thyng
That any fowel may in his ledene seyn,
And koude answere hym in his ledene ageyn,
Hath understondé what this faupon seyde,
And wel neigh for the routhe almoost she deyde;
And to the tree she gooth ful hastily,
And on this faupon looketh pitously,
And heeld hir lappe abrood, for wel she wiste
The faupon mosté fallen fro the twiste,
Whan that it swnownéd next, for lakke of blood.
A longé while to wayten hire she stood,
Til atte laste she spak in this manere
Unto the hauk, as ye shal after heere:

'What is the cause, if it be for to telle,
That ye be in this furial pyne of helle?'
Quod Canacee unto the hauk above.

'Is this for sorwe of deeth, or los of love?
For, as I trowé, thise been causes two
That causen moost a gentil herté wo.
Of oother harm it nedeth nat to speke,
For ye youre-self upon your-self yow wreke,
Which proveth well that outhér ire or drede
Moot been enchesoun of youre cruel dede,
Syn that I see noon oother wight yow chace.
For love of God, as dooth youre-selven grace,
Or what may been youre helpe; for West nor Est
Ne saugh I never, er now, no bryd ne beest
That ferđé with hymself so pitously.
Ye sle me with youre sorwē, verrailly;
I have of yow so greet compassioun.
For Goddes love, com fro the tree adoun;
And, as I am a kyngēs doghter trewe,
If that I verraily the causē knewe
Of youre disese, if it lay in my myght,
I wolde amenden it er it were nyght,
As wisly helpe me gretē God of kynde!
And herbēs shal I right ynowe y-fynde
To heelē with youre hurtēs hastily.'
Tho shrighte this faucon yet moore pitously
Than ever she dide, and fil to grounde anon,
And lith aswownē, deed, and lyk a stoon,
Til Canacee hath in hire lappe hire take Unto the tyme she gan of swough awake;
And after that she of hir swough abreyde
Right in hir haukes ledene thus she seyde:
'That pitee renneth soone in gentil herte,
Feelynge his similitude in peynes smerte,
Is prevēd al day, as men may it see,
As wel by werk as by auctorītee;
For gentil hertē kitheth gentillesse.
I se wel that ye han of my distresse
Compassioun, my faire Canacee,
Of verray wommanly benignytee
That nature in youre principles hath set;
But for noon hopē for to fare the bet,
But for to obeye unto youre hertē free,
And for to maken othere be war by me,
As by the whelpe chastysed is the leoun,
Right for that cause and for that conclusioun,
Whil that I have a leyser and a space,
Myn harm I wol confessen, er I pace.'
And ever whil that oon hir sorwé tolde
That oother weepe as she to water wolde,
Til that the faucon bad hire to be stille,
And, with a syk, right thus she seyde hir wille.

'Ther I was bred, alal! that hardé day,—
And fostred in a roche of marbul gray
So tendrēly that no thyng eyled me,—
I nystē nat what was adver sitee
Til I koude flee ful hye under the sky—
Tho dwelte a tercelet me fasté by,
That seméd welle of allé gentillesse;
Al were he ful of tresoun and falsnesse,
It was so wrapped under humble cheere,
And under hewe of trouthe in swich manere,
Under plesance, and under bisy peyne,
That no wight koude han wend he koude feyne,
So depe in greyn he dyéd his coloures.
Right as a serpent hit hym under floures
Til he may seen his tymē for to byte,
Right so this god of love, this ypocryte,
Dooth so his cerymonyes and obeisaunces,
And kepeth in semblant alle his observaunces
That sowneth into gentillesse of love.
As in a tounbe is al the faire above,
And under is the corps, swich as ye woot,
Swich was this ypocrite, bothe coold and hoot,
And in this wise he servèd his entente,
That save the feend, noon wistè what he mente
Til he so longe hadde wopen and compleyned,
And many a yeer his service to me feyned,
Til that myn herte, to pitous and to nyce,
Al innocent of his corouned malice,
For-ferèd of his deeth, as thoughtè me,
Upon his othès and his seurêtee,
Graunted hym love upon this condicioun,
That evermoore myn honour and renoun
Were savèd, bothè privee and apert:
This is to seyn, that after his desert,
I yaf hym al myn herte and al my thoght,—
God woot, and he, that otherwise noght,—
And took his herte in chaunge of myn for ay;
But sooth is seyd, goon sithen many a day,
“A trewe wight and a theef thenken nat oon”;
And whan he saugh the thyng so fer y-goon
That I hadde graunted hym fully my love,
In swich a gyse as I have seyd above,
And yeven hym my trewe herte as fre
As he swoor he yaf his hertè to me;
Anon this tigre ful of doublenesse
Fil on his knees with so devout humblesse,
With so heigh reverence, and, as by his cheere,
So lyk a gentil lovere of manere,
So ravysshed, as it semèd, for the joye,
That never Jason, ne Parys of Troye,— Jason? Cértès, ne noon oother man
Syn Lameth was, that alderfirst bigan
To loven two, as writen folk biforn;
Ne never, syn the firsté man was born,
Ne koudé man, by twenty thousand part,
Countrefeté the sophymes of his art,
Ne weré worthy unbokele his galoché
Ther doublenesse or feynyng sholde approche,
Ne so koude thanke a wight as he dide me!
His manere was an hevene for to see
Til any womman, were she never so wys,
So peynted he, and kembde at point-devys,
As wel his wordés as his contenaunce;
And I so loved hym for his obeisaunce,
And for the trouthe I deméd in his herte,
That if so were that any thyng hym smerte,
Al were it never so lite, and I it wiste,
Me thoughte I felté deeth myn herté twiste;
And shortly, so ferforth this thyng is went,
That my wyl was his willés instrument,—
This is to seyn, my wyl obeyed his wyl
In allé thyng, as fer as resoun fil, Kepynge the boundés of my worshipe ever;
Ne never hadde I thyng so lief, ne lever,
As hym, God woot! ne never shal namo.
This lasteth lenger than a yeer or two
That I supposéd of hym noght but good;
But finally thus atté laste it stood,
That Fortune woldé that he mosté twynne
Out of that placé which that I was inne.
Wher me was wo, that is no questioun;
I kan nat make of it discripsioun,
For o thyng dare I tellen boldely,
I knowe what is the peyne of deeth ther-by;
Swich harme I felte for he ne myghte bileve!
So on a day of me he took his leve,
So sorwful eek that I wende verraily
That he had felt as muche harm as I,
Whan that I herde hym speke and saugh his hewe;
But nathëleses I thoughte he was so trewe,
And eek that he repairë sholde ageyn
Withinne a litel whilë, sooth to seyn,
And resoun wolde eek that he moste go
For his honour, as ofte it happeth so,
That I made vertu of necessitee,
And took it wel, syn that it moste be.
As I best myghte I hidde fro hym my sorwe
And took hym by the hond, Seint John to borwe,
And seydë thus: "Lo, I am yourës al;
Beth swich as I to yow have been and shal."
What he answerde it nedeth noght reherce;
Who kan sey bet than he, who kan do werse?
Whan he hath al wel seyd, thanne hath he doon.
"Therfore bihoveth hire a ful long spoon
That shal ete with a feend," thus herde I seye;
So attë laste he mostë forth his weye,
And forth he fleeth til he cam ther hym lestë,
Whan it cam hym to purpos for to reste.
I trowe he haddë thilkë text in myndë,
That "Allë thyng repeiryngë to his kynde Gladeth hymself,"—thus seyn men, as I gesse.
Men loven of propré kynde newefangelnesse,
As briddës doon that men in cages fede;
For though thou nyght and day take of hem hede,
And strawe hir cage faire, and softe as silk,
And yeve hem sugre, hony, breed and milk,
Yet right anon as that his dore is uppe,
He with his feet wol spurne adoun his cuppe,
And to the wode he wole, and wormës ete;
So newëfangel been they of hire mete
And loven novelrie of propré kynde,
No gentillesse of blood [ne] may hem bynde.

'So ferde this tercëlet, alas, the day!
Though he were gentil born, and fressh and gay,
And goodlich for to seen, and humble and free.
He saugh upon a tyme a kyte flee,
And sodeynly he loved this kyte so
That al his love is clëné fro me go,
And hath his trouthë falsëd in this wyse.
Thus hath the kyte my love in hire servyse,
And I am lorn withouten remedie.'
And with that word this faucon gan to crie,
And swnownéd eft in Canacës barm.

Greet was the sorwë for the haukes harm
That Canacee and alle hir wommen made;
They nystë how they myghte the faucon glade,
But Canacee hom bereth hire in hir lappe,
And softey in plastres gan hire wrappe,
Ther as she with hire beek hadde hurt hirselve.
Now kan nat Canacee but herbës delve
Out of the ground, and make salves newe
Of herbës preciouse, and fyne of hewe,
To heelen with this hauk; fro day to nyght.
She dooth hire bisynesse and al hir myght,
And by hire beddes heed she made a mewe,
And covered it with veluettés blewe,
In signe of trouthe that is in wommen sene,
And al withoute the mewe is peynted grene,
In which were peynted alle thise falsé fowles,
As beth thise tidyves, tercèlettes and owles;
And pyés, on hem for to crie and chyde,
Right for despit, were peynted hem bisyde.

Thus lete I Canacee, hir hauk kepyng,
I wol namoore as now speke of hir ryng
Til it come eft to purpos for to seyn
How that this faucon gat hire love ageyn,
Repentant, as the storie telleth us,
By mediacioun of Cambalus,
The kynges sone, of whiche I yow tolde;
But hennes-forth I wol my proces holde
To speke of adventures and of batailles,
That never yet was herd so greet mervailles.

First wol I tellé yow of Cambyuskan,
That in his tymé many a citee wan;
And after wol I speke of Algarsif,
How that he wan Theodera to his wif,
For whom ful ofte in greet peril he was,
Ne hadde he ben holpé by the steede of bras;
And after wol I speke of Cambalo,
That faught in lystés with the bretheren two
For Canacee, er that he myghte hire wynne;
And ther I lefte I wol ageyn bigynne.
[PART III]

Appollo whirleth up his chaar so hye,
Til that the god Mercurius hous, the slye—

Heere folwen the wordes of the Frankelyn to the Squier, and the wordes of the Hoost to the Frankelyn

‘In feith, Squier, thow hast thee wel y-quit
And gentilly, I preisé wel thy wit,’
Quod the Frankeleyn, ‘considerynge thy yowthe
So feelyngly thou spekest, sire, I allowe the,
As to my doom ther is noon that is heere
Of eloquencé that shal be thy peere,
If that thou lyve! God yevé thee good chaunce,
And in vertu sende thee continuance;
For of thy speche I havé greet deyntee.
I have a sone, and, by the Trinitee!
I haddé levere than twenty pound worth lond,
Though it right now were fallen in myn hond,
He were a man of swich discrecioun
As that ye been; fy on possessioun,
But if a man be vertuous withal!
I have my soné snybbéd and yet shal,
For he to vertu listeth nat entende,
But for to pleye at dees, and to despende
And lese al that he hath, is his usage;
And he hath levere talken with a page
Than to comune with any gentil wight,
There he myghte lerné gentillesse aright.’
'Straw for youre "gentillessé,"' quod our Hoost.
'What! Frankéleyn, pardee, sire, wel thou woost
That ech of yow moot tellen attê lestè
A tale or two, or breken his biheste.'
'That knowe I wel, sire,' quod the Frankéleyn,
'I prey yow haveth me nat in desdeyn Though to this man I speke a word or two.'
'Telle on thy tale, withouten wordès mo!'
'Gladly, sire Hoost,' quod he, 'I wol obeaye Unto your wyl; now herkneth what I seye.
I wol yow nat contrarien in no wyse
As fer as that my wittês wol suffyse;
I prey to God that it may plesen yow,
Thanne woot I wel that it is good ynow.'
NOTES.

1. Squier. Three manuscripts omit these eight lines, two others read Sire Frankeleyn, and the Harley ms. has Sir Squier. But the rhyme of Squier—bacheler in the Prologue (ll. 79, 80) shows that the word was a dissyllable, accented on the last; and with this pronunciation there is no room for the Sire.

2.sey somewhat of love, etc. In the Prologue the Squire is described as "a lovyere and a lusty bacheler," and we are told of his "hope to stonden in his lady grace," and of the love that caused him to sleep "namoore than dooth a nyghtyngale."

9. Sarray, in the land of Tartarye. According to a note in Col. Yule's Marco Polo (vol. i., p. 5), Sarai was a city on the banks of the Akhtuba branch of the Wolga, founded by Bâtû Khan, who died in 1257. In the next century it was described as "a very handsome and populous city, so large that it made half a day's journey to ride through it." It was destroyed by Timur on his second invasion of Kipchak (1395-96), and extinguished by the Russians a century later.

10. that werreyed Russye. "Russia was overrun with fire and sword as far as Tver and Torshok by Bâtû Khan (1237-38), some years before his invasion of Poland and Silesia. Tartar tax-gatherers were established in the Russian cities as far north as Rostrov and Jaroslawl, and for many years Russian princes, as far as Novgorod, paid homage to the Mongol Khans in their court at Sarai" (Yule's Marco Polo). It is noteworthy that Chaucer tells us of the Squire's father, the good knight (Prologue, 54-55):

"In Lettow hadde he reysed and in Ruce,— No cristen man se ofte of his degree."

These Russian campaigns would be against the Tartars.

20. Pitous and just, and evermore yliche: this with the spelling pietous is the reading of the Hengwrt ms.; the others have And pitous and just alwey y-liche, which, as Prof. Skeat points out, can be made to scan by reading pietous for pitous.

22. as any centre stable. For the idea of 'centre' as the "point, pivot, axis, or line, round which a body turns or revolves,” and so an emblem of stability as compared with motion, the New Eng. Dict. quotes this passage, and, among others, Milton, Par. Regained, iv. 534:

> “As a rock
> Of Adamant, and as a centre, firm,” and Carlyle, French Revolution, III. v. v. 197, “Not even an Anarchy, but must have a centre to revolve round.”

23. in armes desirous, apparently a stock phrase. Of the five quotations in the New Eng. Dict. for this use of ‘desirous’ (= eager), four link the word with ‘arms.’

24. bacheler, a young knight; strictly, one ‘not old enough, or having too few vassals, to display his own banner, and who therefore followed the banner of another’ (N.E.D.).

25. fortunat. Chaucer probably means not merely that Cambyskan had enjoyed good luck, but that he had been born under what astrologers considered a “lucky star.”

29. Elpheta. No one has yet proposed any explanation of this name, or of Algarsyf in the next line. They are not the kind of names which Chaucer would invent; and till they have been traced, we may be quite sure that we have not found the sources which he used for this story.

31. Cambalo. Keightley (see Introduction) suggests that this name was taken from that of Cambaluc, Kublai Khan’s capital. But Kambala is a Tartar name, and the hypothesis seems unnecessary.

33. Canacee. There is a story of a Canacé in Ovid’s Heroides, Ep. xi., imitated by Gower in his Confessio Amanitis. But as Chaucer reprobates this story in the prologue to the Man of Law’s Tale (b 77-79), he would hardly have taken the name for his heroine if it had not occurred in the (unknown) source of this tale.

37. Myn Englishsh eek is insufficient. For the phrase “Myn Englishsh,” cp. the description of the Friar (Prologue, 264-65):

> “Somewhat he lipsed for his wantownesse,
> To make his Englishsh sweet upon his tongue.”

In the fourteenth century, when English was only just completing its victory over French, the use of the word, where we should now only say ‘language,’ is significant. Cp. Legend of Good Women (Text b), 66, 67:

> “Allas, that I ne had Englyssh, ryme or prose, > Súffisant this flour to preyse aryght !”

See also Deth of Blaunche, 894-98.

> “Colours ne knowe I none, withouten drede,
> But swiche colours as growen in the mede,
> Or elles swiche as men dye or peynte.”
40. hire discryven every part: ‘every part’ is here used adverbially, as Chaucer elsewhere uses, with the same meaning, ‘everydel.’

Cp. Dethe of Blaunche, 231-32:

“When I hadde red this tale wel,
And over-loked hit everydel.”

45. the feeste of his nativitee. For these Tartar feasts on the birthday of their Khan, see Marco Polo (Yule’s translation), book ii., chap. 4: “You must know that the Tartars keep high festival yearly on their birthdays. ... Now, on his birthday the Great Kaan dresses in the best of his robes, all wrought with beaten gold, and full 12,000 Barons and Knights on that day come forth dressed in robes of the same colour. ... On his birthday also, all the Tartars in the world, and all the countries and governments that owe allegiance to the Kaan, offer him great presents according to their several ability, and as prescription or orders have fixed the amount.” A similar feast, also made an occasion for much present giving, was held at the beginning of the Tartar New Year, in February. This was called the “White Feast.” A similar account, borrowed from Odoric of Pordenone, is given by Mandeville in his chapter “Of the Governance of the great Khan’s Court.”

45-46. leet ... Doon cryen, a pleonasm. Cp. Merlin, 57: “The kyng dide do make this dragon,” the logical subject (men, somebody, etc.) being in each case omitted.

47. The last Idus of March. The first day of the Roman month was called the Kalends, the 5th or (as in March) the 7th day the Nones, the 13th or (as in March) the 15th day the Ides. Days falling between these dates were reckoned from the one next ensuing, as e.g. the 8th, 7th, 6th day before the Ides. The ‘last Idus’ means the Ides themselves, i.e. March 15th.

after the yeer, according to the season.

49-51. Phoebus ... was neigh his exaltacioun, etc. The sun entered the sign of Aries, or the Ram, on March 12th (in Chaucer’s day), and reached his exaltation on March 30th. A face is a third, or ten degrees, of a sign, and the first face in Aries (i.e. March 12th to 21st) was called the face of Mars. The sign of the Ram was the diurnal house or mansion of Mars, to whom (and not to Phoebus) the ‘his’ in l. 30 refers. See Chaucer’s Astrology, §§ 3 and 5.

51. Aries, the colerik hoote signe. In the Kalendar of Shepherds, a fifteenth century almanack, we are told that Aries is one of the three hot or fiery signs, and that the child born under it shall be “soon angry and soon appeysd.”

53. For which the foweles, etc. Cp. Prologue, where, when the sun has finished his course in Aries, i.e. after April 11th, for delight of the spring “the smale foweles maken melodye.” Cp. also the roundel in the Parlement of Foules with its refrain (691-93):

“Now welcom, somer, with thy sonne softe,
Thou hast this wintres weders overshake
And driven a-vey the longe nyghtes blake.”
69. deys (daies, a raised platform), monosyllabic to rhyme with "paleys." The New Eng. Dict. notes "the word died out in England about 1600, its recent revival is due to historical and antiquarian writers. ... Always a monosyllable in French, and in English, where retained as a living word, the dissyllabic pronunciation is a shot at the word from the spelling."

61. And hale his feeste solempne and so ryche. The accent in 'solempne' falling on the second syllable (cp. l. 111.), the e- final in 'feeste' must here be silent, while that in 'solempne' is sounded before a vowel in virtue of the caesural pause.

66. At every cours the ordre of hire servyse. The New Eng. Dict. defines 'course,' in this sense, as a division of a meal, the set of dishes placed upon the table at one time, and quotes from the romance of Coer de Lion (c. 1325):

"Fro kechene come the fryste cours
With pypes and trumpes and tabours," which sufficiently explains "the ordre of hire servyse."

67. hir strange sewes. "A sewer was an officer so called from his placing the dishes upon the table. Asseour, Fr. from asseoir, to place." In the establishment of the king's household there are still four Gentlemen Sewers. Sewes here seem to mean dishes, from the same original; as assiette in French still signifies a little dish or plate. See Gower, Conf. Aman.:

"The flesh, whan it was so to-hewe
She taketh, and maketh thereof a sewe."

(Tyrwhitt's note.)

68. Ne of hir swannes, ne of hire heronsewes. These birds continued to be considered dainties long after Chaucer's time. Henry VIII.'s proclamation of 21st May, 1544, fixed the price of "the best swanne" at not above five shillings, and "heronshewes" at "xvijd the pece."

69-70. Eek in that lond, etc., an allusion to the strange food, such as dogs, rats, and horses, which not only Marco Polo, but Car- pini, Vincent of Beauvais, William de Rubruquis, Mandeville, and other writers represent the Tartars as eating.

73. I wol nat taryen yow, for it is pryme. 'Prime' is properly the first hour or first division of the day after sunrise, or its average equivalent, 6 a.m. But in Chaucer 'fully pryme' and 'pryme large' mean 9 a.m., 'half way pryme' 7-30, and 'prime' in general the time approaching 9 o'clock. This is one of the 'notes of time' by which we trace Chaucer's pilgrims on their road to Canterbury.

75. Unto my firste, etc., I will return to my first subject.

78. hir thynges pleye. The word 'thing' is used by Chaucer with various special meanings: to "make a thyng" (Prologue, 325), is 'to draw a legal document'; in the Legend of Good Women, "he useth things for to make" is said of Chaucer's own verse-making; in the Knight's Tale (A 2293), "dide her thinges" means 'made her offerings or sacrifice'; in the Shipman's Tale (b 1281), "sey his thinges" = 'read his appointed prayers.' Here the reference must be to musical compositions. The line should perhaps be scanned:

Hérk | nanye his | mynstrales | hir thyng | es pleye.

79. bord. The typical medieval table was a board placed, when needed, on movable trestles. A fixed table was called a "table dormant" (Prologue, 353).

81. a steede of bras: for notes as to these marvels, see the Introduction.

85. up he rideth to the heighe bord: in Guy of Warwick, when Guy beards the Sultan in his pavilion, we are told:

"Guy rode forth, and spake no word Till he came to the soudans bord."

At coronation banquets in Westminster Hall the champion of England used to ride fully armed into the hall, and there deliver his challenge to all who should contest the king's right.

92. By ordre. Precedence was a very important matter in Chaucer's days. In the Prologue (743-46) he thinks it necessary to ask forgiveness.

"Al have I nat set folk in hir degree Heere in this tale, as that they sholde stonde."

93. obeisaunce, the Harley ms. reads observaunce.

95. Gawayn, with his olde curteisye. Sir Gawain was the son of King Lot of Orkney and nephew of King Arthur. In Malory's Morte d'Arthur not much stress is laid on Gawain's courtesy; but in Sir Gawain and the Green Knight, when it is known that it is he who has come to the castle, "Each said softly to his fellow, 'Now shall we see courteous bearing, and the manner of speech befitting courts. What charm lieth in gentle speech shall we learn without asking, since here we have welcomed the fine father of courtesy'" (Miss Weston's Paraphrase, p. 34). "Gawayn the curtesse and Cay the crabbed" (Thersites, l. 130) passed into a proverb.

96. come ageyn out of fairye. For this assignment of the Knights of the Round Table to fairyland, compare the opening of the Wife of Bath's Tale:

"In tholde dayes of the Kyng Arthur,
Of which that Britons spoken greet honour,
All was this land fulfild of fairy."
Such rhymes have long been rejected in English verse, but they are recognized as permissible in French.

110. The kyng of Arable and of Inde. The maker of the Enchanted Horse in the Arabian Nights is an Indian.

114. al redy at youre heeste. The Harley MS. reads “redy at al his heste.”

115. This steede of bras: see Introduction.

116. o day natureel, as opposed to the ‘artificial’ day, from sunrise to sunset, the length of which (and of its hours) varies.

118. in droghte or elles shoures. Chaucer insists again on the steed’s indifference to weather in l. 121, but it is not unfair to suggest that here he was thinking chiefly of a rhyme.

129. wayted many a constellacioun. The maker of the horse watched the stars to set about his work at an astrologically propitious moment. This watching for fortunate times was the chief feature in the “magik naturel” to which Chaucer often alludes. Cp. the remarks about the “Doctour of Plisik” (Prologue, ll. 414-22); also Man of Law’s Tale, ll. 309-14; and Franklin’s Tale, ll. 1261-96.

131. knew ful many a seel, and many a bond. The use of magical seals dates back from legends of Solomon, of whom we read in the Arabian Nights (Burton, v. 1), “He held sway over Jinn and beast and bird, and was wont when he was wroth with one of the Marids to shut him in a cucurbite (bottle) of brass, and stopping its mouth on him with lead, whereon he impressed his seal-ring, to cast him into the sea.” ‘Bond’ may be used either of a deed binding a spirit to do him service, or a fetter imprisoning a spirit till it was obedient.

132. This mirrour: see Introduction.

146. The vertu of the ryng: see Introduction.

156. This naked swerd: see Introduction.

165. Stróke hym in the wounde. For other lines beginning with a single accented syllable for the first foot, see ll. 346 and 390. The Ellesmere MS. reads strike for stroke.

171. as stille as. Only the Harley MS. makes the line run smoothly by reading as stille as, the other MSS. omitting the first as. In a later writer we might think that the slow movement of a defective line was meant to illustrate the sense, but it is not probable that Chaucer intended this.

174. roially y-fet, i.e. sent for with great ceremony.

193. a steede of Lombardye. Tyrwhitt notes that “there is a patent” in Rymer, 2 E, ii., De dextrariis in Lombardici emendis, “about buying steeds in Lombardy.”

195. a gentil Poilleyes courser. The word ‘courser’ used now for a fleet horse, until about the time of Dryden meant especially a horse ridden in battle or tournament. Cp. R. Johnson's Kingdom and Commonwealth (1630, quoted in New Eng. Dict.) : "The courser of Naples... though he be not so swift as the Spanish Genet, yet is he better able to indure travail, and to beare the weight of Armor." Gentil here means 'high bred,' 'of good stock.' Tyrwhitt notes that a horse of Apulia in old French was usually called Poille, and quotes a playful passage from Richard of Armagh, who contrasts the "mulus Hispaniae" and "dextrarius Apuliae" with the English 'Thom-ass,' i.e. S. Thomas of Canterbury.

207. the Pegasee: the form is explained by the side-note, "equus Pegaseus" (the Pegasean horse), in the Ellesmere and other MSS.
Pegasus was the winged steed of Bellerophon.

209. the Grekes hors Synoun, the horse of the Greek, Sinon, i.e. the Wooden Horse about which Sinon told the Trojans his lying story. For the order of the words, cp. Deth of Blainche, 1. 282 :
"The kynges metyrng Pharao," i.e. the dreaming of the king Pharaoh. Even as late as Malory's Morte d'Arthur we find such a construction as "I am the lordes doghter of this castel" for 'I am the daughter of the lord of this castle.'

211. in thisse olde geestes. Chaucer's knowledge of the siege of Troy was derived from Virgil's Aeneid (book ii.), and from the Historia Trojana of Guido delle Colonne.

213. som men of armes, as in the Trojan horse.

218. An apparence, y-maad by som magyk. The best commentary on this line is a passage from the Franklin's Tale (f 1139-51) :

"For I am siker that ther be sciences
By whiche men maken diverse apparences,
Swiche as these subtile tregetoures pleye;
For ofte at feestes have I wel herd seye
That tregetours withinne an halle large
Have maad come in a water and a barge,
And in the halle rowen up and doun.
Somtyme hath semed come a grym leoun,
And somtyme floures sprynge as in a mede;
Somtyme a vyne, and grapes white and rede;
Somtyme a castel, al of lym and soon,
And whan hym lyked voyded it anoon—
Thus semed it to every mannes sighte."

219. jogelours, the 'tregetours' of the quotation from the Franklin's Tale.

226. the maistre tour, the master or chief tower. The Ellesmere and Cambridge MSS. read "the hye tour" as in l. 176.

231. in Rome was swich oon. In some way, not quite satisfactorily explained, out of the fame of the poet Virgil there grew up a number of medieval legends about a Virgil who was a magician.
One of the inventions attributed to him was a magic mirror in which the Emperor of Rome could see what his enemies were doing thirty miles off. The story of this is told by Gower in his Confessio Amantis, and is alluded to in the romance of Cleomades (see Introduction) which resembles the Squire's Tale in so many points.

233. Aristotle, the Greek philosopher, who lived B.C. 384-332. that written in hir lyves, that wrote in their lifetimes.

238. Thelophus the kng, Telephus of Mysia, whom Achilles, when on his way to Troy, wounded with his spear. He overtook Achilles at Argos, and with the help of Clytemnestra made him heal the wound with rust or splinters from the spear which gave it.

239. And of Achilles for his queynte spere, they talked of Achilles because of his wonderful spear. Instead of for the Ellesmere and Cambridge mss. read with.

250. he Moyses and knyng Salomon. The belief in Moses as a magician sprang from the wonders he performed to break down Pharaoh's refusal to let the Israelites go; the supernatural gift of wisdom to Solomon gave him a similar fame. According to Mr. Clouston, the "so-called ring of Moses" caused its wearer "to forget his love, in fact everything; hence it was called the Ring of Oblivion."

263. the angle meridional. The four angles answered to the 1st, 4th, 7th, and 10th Houses (see Chaucer's Astrology, § 5), the southern angle being the last of the four. On March 15th the sun would pass through this House between 10 a.m. and noon.

265. The gentil Leon, with hys Aldrian, or Aldiran, the star marking the fore-paws of the constellation Leo. According to Prof. Skeat Leo would begin to ascend on March 15th about noon, but the star Aldiran would not be visible till nearly two o'clock.

273. For in the FYssh hir lady sat ful hye. Venus has her "exaltation" in the sign of Pisces. See note on Chaucer's Astrology, § 6.

274. eye, the true spelling in Chaucer's day is ye.

279. That is nat able a dul man to devyse. In this and the three following lines Chaucer is thinking of himself, not of his Squire, of whom in the Prologue (l. 92) he had expressly said, "He was as fresh as is the month of May." We might imagine from this passage that the Squire's Tale was written independently of the Canterbury Tales, but the note of time in l. 73 seems to show the contrary.

287. No man but Launcelet, Launcelot, the bravest and most courteous of Arthur's knights, and the secret lover of Queen Guinevere.
292. Chambre of parements. Tyrwhitt notes that "Chambre de parement" is translated by Cotgreave (in his French-English Dictionary) the presence-chamber, and lit de parement a bed of state. Parements originally signified all sorts of ornamental furniture or clothes, from parer, Fr. to adorn."

297. they soupen al by day. In Sir Gawain and the Green Knight Gawain reaches the castle in the morning of Christmas Eve, dresses, has dinner, goes to service, after which spices and wine are served, followed by merry talk and bed. Here the knight with his presents arrives after the third course of dinner; dinner i.; over about 2 p.m.; after dinner comes dancing followed by spices and wine, and then by a service and supper by daylight, i.e. about 6 p.m. After supper the horse is inspected, and the revels resumed and kept up far into the night.

299. that a kynges feeste: the Hengwrt and three minor MSS. mend the metre of this line by reading "that at a kynges feeste," and with this reading it is said that "hath plente" in the next line is to be explained as an adaptation of the French construction il y a. But in the absence of other English parallels to such a construction the reading can hardly be accepted against the authority of the Ellesmere, Cambridge, and Harleian MSS.

302. At after. The New Eng. Dict. gives the following note: "At after, prep., used where we should now use after alone to indicate time when. The after may in some cases belong to the sb. following; cf. after-noon." The instances quoted from other authors are "at after matins," "at after midnight," and "at after noon."

306. grete sege of Troie, cp. l. 20.

316. Ye mooten trille a pyne, stant in his ere. The omission of the relative (stant, for which standeth) is uncommon in Chaucer.

346. Til wel ny, etc.: for the metre, cp. l. 165.

352. blood was in his domynacioun. According to the Shepherd's Kalendar (Pynson's ed. 1506) the four complexions of man are the sanguine, choleric, melancholy, and phlegmatic. "Syxe hours after mydnyght blode hath ye maistry, and in the .vi. hours after noone colour reyneth, and .vi. houres after none reyneth melancholy, and .vi. hours afore mydnyght reygnyth the fleme." According to a quotation of Tyrwhitt's from the De Natura of the pseudo-Galen, the domination of blood lasted from the ninth hour of the night to the third of the day.

360. it was pryme large, fully 9 o'clock. See note to l. 73.

374. hir maistresse, i.e. her duenna or chaperone.

376. that been gladly wyse, that gladly show off their wisdom. Grammatically, the subject to 'answerde' is 'thise olde wommen,' but the real subject is, of course, 'hir maistresse.'

385. the yonge sonne. The sun is called 'young' because he was supposed to begin his annual course at the vernal equinox, the Ram or Aries (cp. l. 51) being the first 'sign' into which he enters. Into this he came, in Chaucer's time, on March 12th, and on March 16th (the story opens on the 15th, see l. 47) at his rising he would be passing from the 4th degree to the 5th. See Chaucer's Astrology, § 2.

387. Noon hyer was he, etc., the sun was not more than four degrees above the horizon, i.e. had only risen about a quarter of an hour.

388. esily a pas. To walk 'apace,' or 'at a pace,' now means to walk quickly, but in Chaucer's day it had the opposite sense of 'at a footpace' (cp. Prologue, 825, "and forth we ridden a litel more than paas"), and so 'slowly.' Cp. Troilus, ii. 624-28:

"And wounded was his hors and gan to blede,
On which he rod a pas ful softly."

392. a trench, literally 'a cutting' (Fr. trancher), a path cut through the wood.

401-405. The knotte, etc. The 'it' in l. 401 is resumptive. The bald meaning of the passage is: 'If the plot, which is the chief object of every tale, is retarded till the pleasure of those who for a long time have been listening to catch it grows cold, the agreeableness of it becomes continually less, from the satiety produced by the teller's long-windedness.'

409. Amydde a tree fordrye. There seems no reason to identify this with the famous 'Arbre see' or 'Dry Tree,' mentioned by medieval travellers, which was said to have dried up at the time of Christ's crucifixion.

419. nys tigre noon, ne cruel beest: text from the Harleian MS.; EC, "nys tigre ne noon so cruel beest"; Hengwrt, "nys tigre ne so cruel beest"; Corp. Pet. Laus., "ne was tygre ne cruel beest."

425. swich another of fairnesse. For this use of 'of,' meaning 'with reference to,' 'in respect of,' cp. Parlement of Foules, 298-301:

"Tho was I war wher that ther sat a quene
That as of light the somer-sunne shene
Passeth the sterre, right so over mesure
She fairer was than any creature."

428. A faucon peregryn. Tyrwhitt quotes a passage from the Tresor de Brunet Latin, which tells us "the second kind is the falcon, which is called pelerins, because no one finds its nest, and so it is taken elsewhere as if on pilgrimages; and it is very easy to bring up, very courteous, and brave, and of good manner." ('La seconde ligne est faucons, que hom apele pelerins, par ce que nus ne trove son ni; ains est pris autresi come en pelerinage; et est mult legiers a norrir, et mult cortois, et vaillans, et de bone maniere.")

434. she understood wel every thynge. The rhythm of the verse shows that 'wel' must be taken with 'every thynge' rather than with 'understood.' The meaning is thus not 'she understood everything well,' but 'she understood quite everything.' Cp. Legend of Good Women, 10-11:

"But God forbede but men shulde leve Wel more thynge than men han seen with eye."

447. if it be for to telle, if it be lawful or suitable to tell. Cp. Mars, 74: "But for his nature was not for to wepe."

455. ire. The Ellesmere reading love seems at first sight much simpler, but anger at broken faith and dread of such treachery go very well together, whereas if we read love we must take drede to stand for 'fear' absolutely, which is out of keeping with the passage.

458. as dooth: for this use of 'as' heralding an imperative to express a wish, cp. Doctor's Tale (c 66), "As dooth me right upon this pitous bille"; Miller's Tale (A 3777), "As lene it me."

461. ferde with hymself: 'faren' often means 'behave' (cp. l. 621), but it means also to prosper or succeed, ill or well (cp. Canon's Yeoman's Tale, G 1417, "So faren ye that multiplie, I seye"). Thus 'faren with' means to 'succeed in relation to.' Cp. Miller's Tale (A 3457), "so ferde another clerk with astromye," i.e. 'this is what another clerk got from astronomy.' The sense here is 'that was so piteously treated by himself.'

465. And... If... I... knew, etc. We should expect either 'for if I knew I would,' etc., or 'and if I shall learn... I will.'

471. To heele with youre hurtes, with which to heal your hurts. Cp. l. 641.

476. Unto the tyme she gan, i.e. until the time she should begin.

482. auctoritee, the usual word for the opinion of writers of repute.

491. As by the whelpe chastysed is the leoun, a proverb. Prof. Skeat appositely compares Othello, ii. 3, 372, "a punishment more in policy than in malice; even so as one would beat his offenceless dog to affright an imperious lion." The 'whipping boy' who was educated with a little prince, and whipped for the prince's faults, was a good example of this theory. The Ellesmere and Hengwrt mss. read chasted for chastysed.

496. as she to water wolde, as if she would melt, or dissolve in tears; for 'wolde' cp. l. 617, "and to the wode he wole,"
506. Al were he, although he was. Our modern distinction by which we use the indicative after words like ‘although,’ to express a fact, and the subjunctive to express a belief, was not observed by Chaucer.

512. hit, the contracted form for ‘hideth.’

515-16. The Harleian ms. reads observaunce instead of obeis-saunces, and in the next line, “Under subtil colour and aequyn-taunce.”

526. his corouned malice. For ‘corouned’ in this sense of ‘perfect,’ ‘consummate,’ cp. Burton’s Anatomy of Melancholy: “Tis a crowned medicine which must be kept in secret.”

527. For-fered of his deeth, as thoughte me, rather a loose construction, ‘greatly afraid that, as it seemed to me, he would die.’

537. A trewe wight and a theef thenken nat oon, an honest man and a thief do not see alike. Neither the source of the proverb nor any close parallel to it has been found.

542. Prof. Skeat mends the metre of this line by reading “As he swoor he his herte yaf to me.”

548. Jason, who deserted Medea, by whose aid he had won the Golden Fleece, for Creusa.

Parys of Troye, who deserted Oenone for Helen.

550. Syn Lameth was, etc. See Genesis iv. 19. The Wyf of Bath in her Prologue asks,

“ What rekth me thogh folk seye vileynye
Of shrewed Lameth, and his bigamye?” (D 53, 54)

and in Anelyda and Arcyte he is celebrated in a whole stanza (ll. 148-54):

“ But nathelesse, gret wonder was hit noon
Thogh he were fals, for hit is kynde of man,
Sith Lamek was, that is so longe agoon,
To been in love as fals as ever he can;
IIe was the firste fader that began
To loven two, and was in bigamye.
And he found tentes first, but if men lyc.”

553. by twenty thousand part, by the twenty thousandth part.

555. Ne were worthy unbokele his galoche, a reminiscence of “The latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to stoop down and unloose.” (Mark i. 7.) The galoche was a sort of patten.

559. Til any womman: this Northern form til is used by Chaucer before a vowel. Cp. Prologue, 179-80:

“Ne that a Monk whan he is reccheles
Is likned til a fissh that is waterlees.”

So “til a grove,” Knight’s Tale (A 1478).
560. kembde at point-devys, arranged to a nicety.

579. Wher me was wo, that is no questioun: in modern English, 'you need not ask whether I was grieved.'

593. That I made vertu of necessitee. S. Jerome in his Epistles (Ep. 52, § 6) writes, "Fac de necessitate virtutem"; and in Chaucer's favourite Roman de la Rose (l. 14,058) we have the phrase, "sil ne fait de necessite virtu."

596. Seint John to borwe, Saint John being security. For the use of the dative, cp. "his nekke lith to wedde" (i.e. in pledge), Knight's Tale, A 1218, and "Ech of hem had leyd his feith to borwe," ib. 1622. It is usually said that the S. John is S. John the divine, who praises truth in his Epistles; but it is at least possible that the reference may be to S. John Baptist, with whose midsummer festival many lovers' rites were connected.

601. Whan he hath al wel-seyd, thanne hath he doon, he protests beautifully and does nothing more.

602. bihoveth hire a ful long spoon, etc. Cp. Tempest, ii. 2, where Stephano says of Caliban, "This is a devil and no monster. I will leave him. I have no long spoon." For hire the Harleian and three other MSS. read hym.

604. he moste forth his weye, he must go forth on his way. Both must and forth can be used with an ellipse of go. Cp. Hous of Fame, 187, "he moste into Itaille"; Troilus, v. 5, "Criseyde moste out of the toun"; and Robert of Brunne, "No lenger suld thai bye, bot forth and stand to chance."

608. thilke text ... That "Alle thyng repeiryng to his kynde," etc. From Boethius, De Consolatione Philosophiae, book iii., met. 2, translated by Chaucer: "Alle thynges seken ayen to hir propre cours, and alle thynges rejoysen hem of hir retornyng ayen to hir nature." The simile in ll. 611, etc., is from the same source: "the janglinge brid that syngeth on the heigh branches, and after is enclosed in a streyte cage, al thoghe that the pleyinge bysynes of men yeveth hem honyed drynkes and large metes, with swete studyes [Chaucer's translation of 'dulci studio'], yit natheles yif thilke bryd skippyng out of hir streyte cage seith the agreable schadwes of the wodes, sche defouleth with hir feet hir metes i-schad, and seketh mornyng oonly the wode, and twytereth desyryng the wode with hir swete voys." Cp. also Manciples Tale (H 163-174).

613-615. hir ... his. Chaucer changes from the plural to the singular.

617. to the wode he wole, cp. l. 496.

638. Now kan nat Canacee but herbes delve, Canacee can now do nothing but dig herbs. For nat ... but, cp. l. 391.

641. To heelen with this hauk, cp. l. 471.

644. veluettes blewe ... peynted grene. For the contrast of blue and green as the colours typical of faithfulness and inconstancy, cp. the _Balade against Women Unconstant_, attributed to Chaucer, ll. 6, 7:

"To newe thygne your lust is ay so kene;
In stede of blew, thus may ye we e all grene."

649, 650. The mss. give these lines in the reverse order. The transposition was proposed by Tyrwhitt.

655. _as the storie telleth us_. An explicit reference like this surely proves that Chaucer took his plot from some earlier writer, and did not piece it together himself from stray hints in books like the travels of Marco Polo.

667. Cambalo, apparently _not_ Canacee's brother, though bearing the same name.

671, 672. Appollo. The house of Mercury is in the sign Gemini, which the chariot of the Sun would not enter until the middle of May, nearly two months after the beginning of the story.

697, 698. _moot tellen atte leste A tale or two_, etc. In the _General Prologue_ Harry Bailey laid down (ll. 792) that each pilgrim "in this viage shal telle tales tweye," and all the subsequent references agree with this. But ll. 793, 794 of the _Prologue_, which read so much like an interpolation, oblige each pilgrim to tell four stories, two going and two returning.
ILLUSTRATIONS OF CHAUCER'S GRAMMAR FROM THE SQUIRE'S TALE.

SUBSTANTIVES.

I. Examples of Substantives possessing a fully-sounded e-final independent of inflection.

(a) Words of French Origin: Cage, 613; cause, 185, 466; eloquence, 678; gentilesse, 694; joye, 368; place, 578. But in l. 186 place is monosyllabic.

(b) Words of English Origin: Herte (O.E. heorte), 120, 483; kyte (cyta), 624; knotte (cnotta), 401; sone (sunu), 688; sonne (sunne), 53, 170; sorwe (sorg), 495; steede (steda), 170; tale (talu), 6, 168; trouthe (treowth), 627; wille (willa), 1; yowthe (geoguth), 675.

Besides the dissyllabic wille, Chaucer also uses the monosyllabic wyl (568, 569, 704). In ll. 31, 48, 124, the apparent silence of the e final in sone, sonne, and steede is explainable as due to its occurrence at the cæsural pause.

II. Inflections.

(a) Genitive singular in -es: Beddes, 643; Goddes, 464; haukes, 632; kynges, 299; someres, 64; willes, 568.

(b) Datives in -e: Borwe, 596; while, 590.

Note.—Halle in halle-dore, l. 80, may be intended as a genitive feminine, and halle in l. 86 as a dative, but as halle is the M.E. form in the nominative also, we cannot quote these as survivals of old inflections.

(c) Plurals in -es: Bookes, 235; heddes, 358; knyghtes, 69; lordes, 304; rynges, 249; thynges, 78; wordes, 103; wynges, 208.

In l. 706 wittes is dissyllabic; in l. 203, 'as many heddes as manye wittes ther been.' We can only give it its full value by omitting 'ther,' an omission not supported by any of the seven manuscripts.

(d) Plurals in -en: Asshen, 255; been, 204.
Plurals without inflection: Folk, 203; pound, 683; wynter, 63.

ADJECTIVES.

I. Examples of adjectives possessing a fully-sounded e-final independent of inflection.

Fremde, 429; fresshe, 384; longe, 444.

Note.—For fresshe as a dissyllable compare 'fresshe Beantee' (Pity, 39); for longe, cp. 'longe tyme' (Deth of Blaunche, 380). But Chaucer is not consistent as regards this e-final in adjectives.

II. Definite forms making singular in -e.

The firste man, 552; the grete sege, 306; the heighe bord, 85; my trewe herte, 541.

III. Indefinite, without inflection.

A brood mirour, 82; a greet route, 382; so heigh reverence, 545; a trew wight, 537; yong, fressh, and strong in armes desirous, 23.

IV. Plurals in -e.

Olde poetries, 206; olde geestes, 211; queynte mirours, 234; swichte thynges, 227.

V. Genitive plural in -er, -re, -ra.

Alderfirst (first of all), 550.

VI. Comparatives.

Note the form 'badder,' 226.

ADVERBS.

I. In -e.

Faste, 504; loude, 55; soore, 258.

II. In -ly.

Deliciously, 79; openly, 136; sikerly, 180; sodeynly, 80.

III. In -ely.

Boldely, 581; softely, 636.

IV. Comparatives.

Note the form 'bet,' 600.

VERBS.

I. Present Indicative.

(a) 1st sing. in -e: I trowe, 451.

(b) 3rd sing. in -eth, -th: Amounteth, 108; cesseth, 258;
demeth, 221; gladeth, 393; happeth, 592; listeth, 689; dooth, 123; fleeth, 149; lith, 322.

(c) Contracted form of 3rd sing. Byt, 291; halt, 61; hit, 512; sit, 77; stant, 170.

(d) Plural in -en, -e: Dauncen, 272; demen, 261; drawen, 252; knowen, 235; shapen, 214; sownen, 270; jangle, 261; speke, 244.

(e) Plural in -eth: Sowneth, 517.

II. Past Indicative. 1st and 3rd sing.:

(a) Strong. Baar, 433; bad, 348; cam, 181; fil, 473; glood, 393; wan, 662; yaf, 533.

(b) Weak. (i.) Dyde, 11; kembde, 560; lakked, 16; peynted, 560; felte, 566; kepte, 18; mente, 108. (ii.) broghte, 210; thoughte, 566; wroghte, 128.

III. Imperative Present.

(a) 2nd sing.:

Strong. Com, 464.

Weak. (i.) Sey, 2; (ii.) trille, 328.

(b) 2nd plur.:

Beth, 598; cherisseth, 353; dooth, 458.

IV. Infinitives in -en, -n, -e.

(a) Fallen, 134; percen, 237; taryen, 73; tellen, 63; doon, 323; goon, 200; aryse, 262; heere, 144; rebelle, 5; telle, 6.

(b) Gerundial:

To fleen, 122; to seyne, 314; to telle, 34; to were, 147; to wynne, 214.

V. Past Participles.

Strong. Doon, 129; y-goon, 293; knowe, 215; y-bore, 326; y-drawe, 326.

Weak. (a) Cleped, 12; herd, 235; renewed, 181; y-glewed, 182; y-harded, 245. (b) Toold, 58.
GLOSSARY.

Note.—y in the middle of a word is arranged as 1.

abreyde, 3 s. pret. started, awoke, 477 (O.E. abregdan).
abrood, adv. abroad, spread out, 441.
accordant, adj. agreeable to, 103.
adoun, adv. down, 351.
affecciouns, sb. pl. desires, 55.
after, adv. afterwards, 188; prep. after, according to, 47.
agayn, ageyn, adv. again, 96, 331; prep. against, 6; in the presence, at the approach of, 53, 142.
ago, p.p. agone, gone,626 (var.).
al, adj. all, 24, 34; alle, dat. s. 15.
al, adv. although, 155, 506; al be it, albeit, although it so be that, 105.
alderfirst, first of all, 550 (the prefix is the old genitive plural aller, alra; cp. allerbest, alder-levest).
aligates, adv. at all events, anyhow, 246.
alowe, 1 s. pres. praise, 676.
amende, v. amend, improve, 97, 197.
amys, adv. amiss, wrongly, 7.
amounteth, 3 sing. pres. amounts to, 108 (O. Fr. amonter, climb up, ascend, attain to).

anoon, adv. anon, at once, 172, 312, 328 (O.E. on dne, in one).
aperceyynges, sb. pl. perceptions, observations, 286.
apert, adj. open, 531 (O. Fr. apert, Lat. apertum).
apalled, p.p. made pale or feeble, 365 (O. Fr. apalir).
appearance, sb. appearance, vision, dream, 218.
aright, adv. rightly, 336.
arriere, sb. armour, 158 (O. Fr. armeure, armure, Lat. armatura).
as, introducing an imperative, 458.
asshen, sb. pl. ashes, 255 (the plural in s is used by Ormin).
assewone, adverb. phrase, in a swoon, fainting, 474.
at after, prep. after, 302 (see note).
atte, at the, 445.
auctoritee, sb. authority, 482 (Lat. auctoritas).
aventures, sb. pl. adventures, 659 (Fr. aventure, Lat. adventura, the d in which begins to re-appear in the English form towards the end of the 15th century, but was not common till the second half of the 16th).
awook, 3 s. pret. awoke, 367.
axeth, 3 s. pres. asks, 309.
baar, 3 s. pret. bare, carried, 433.
bacheler, sb. a young knight (Prov. bacalar, It. baeccalare; Fr. bachelier; the ultimate derivation is doubtful).
badder, adj. comp. worse, 224.
bak, sb. back, 126.
barm, sb. bosom, 631.
batailles, sb. pl. battles, 659.
beek, sb. beak, 418.
been, sb. pi. bees, 204.
been, v. to be, 192; 3 pl. pres. are, 203, 213, 222, 294.
beest, sb. beast, 264.
benigne, adj. kindly, favourable, 21, 52.
benignytee, sb. kindliness, 486.
beren, v. to bear, carry, 119.
beth, 2 pl. imperat. be, 598.
better, adj. better, 102.
bifel, 3 s. pret. befell, happened, 42.
biforn, prep. and adv. before, 79, 339.
bigan, 3 s. pret. began, 312.
biholde, v. to behold, 87.
bileve, v. remain, 583 (O.E. beltefan).
bisy, adj. busy, careful, 509.
bisily, adv. busily, eagerly, 88.
byt, 3 s. pres. biddeth, bids, 291.
bibolde, v. to behold, 87.
bileve, v. remain, 583 (O.E. beltefan).
bisy, adj. busy, careful, 509.
bisily, adv. busily, eagerly, 88.
byt, 3 s. pres. biddeth, bids, 291.
com, 2 s. imperat. come, 464.
comen, p.p. come, 96 (var.).
commune, adj. common, popular, 107.
composiciouns, sb. pl. compositions, arrangements, 229.
conceede, v. settle down to, 407.
constellacioun, sb. constellation, 129.
contenaunce, sb. countenance, aspect, 93; contenaunces, pl. 284.
GLOSSARY

contree, sb. country, 318.
courage, sb. heart, courage, 22.
coroune, p.p. crowned, con- summate, 526.
corps, sb. corpse, body, 519.
cours, sb. course, service (in a meal), 66, 76.
courser, sb. a charger or battle- horse, 195, 310.
craft, sb. art, secret workman- ship, 185, 249.
cryen, v. to cry, 46.
dar, 1 s. pres. dare, 36.
dauncen, 3 pl. pres. dance, 272.
dede, sb. deed, 456.
dead, p.p. dead, 287.
deer, sb. a charger or battle- horse, 195, 310.
deyde, 3 s. pret. died, 438.
deynte, adj. dainty, delicious, 70.
deynte, sb. delight, 681; deyn- tees, pl. dainties, 301.
deys, sb. dais, raised platform, 59.
delve, v. to dig, 638.
deme, 1 s. pres. deem, judge, suppose, 44; demeth, 3 s. pres. 221; demen, 3 pl. pres. 261.
dere, v. to harm, 240 (O.E. dérian).
desert, sb. merit, deserving, 532.
desirous, adj. eager, 23.
despère, v. spend, squander, 690.
despit, sb. despite, scorn, 650. (O. Fr. despit, Lat. despectus, lit. a looking down on).
destruccioun, sb. destruction, 210.
devyse, devysen, v. to describe, 65, 279, 282; devyse, 3 pl. pres. 261 (O. Fr. deviser, late Lat. divisare, to divide, so to mark in detail).
dyde, 3 s. pret. died, 11.
discryve, discryven, v. to de- scribe, 424, 40 (O. Fr. des- criere, Lat. describere: the v form was supplanted by b in England in the 16th century, but survived in Scotch to the time of Burns).
dissymulynges, sb. pl. dissem- blings, 285.
diverse, adj. pl. different, various, 202, 270.
diversely, adv. differently, variously, 202.
doghter, adv. differently, variously, 202.
domynacioun, sb. domination, predominance, 352.
doom, sb. judgment, 677.
doon, v. to do, make, cause, 46, 323, 334; dooth, 3 s. pres. does, 123; 2 s. imperat. do, 458; doon, p.p. done, 297.
doughty, adj. brave, 11 (O.E. dyhtig; cp. Mod. Germ. tüch- tig).
doun, adv. down, 169, 323.
doutes, sb. pl. doubts, 220.
drawen, 3 pl. pres. draw, re- move, 252.
drede, sb. fear, 286.
dremes, sb. pl. dreams, 357.
dresse, 3 pl. pres. subj. make ready for, repair to, 290 (O. Fr. dresser, Lat. directus).
droghte, sb. drought, 118.
dul, adv. dull, 279.
ebbe, sb. ebb-tide, 259.
ech, adj. each, every, 299.
eek, adv. also, eke, 37, 65, 292.
eft, adv. again, 631, 653.
eyled, 3 s. pret. ailed, 501.
ëles, adv. else, otherwise, 118, 209.
enchesoun, sb. cause, occasion, 456 (O. Fr. encheson, Lat. occasionem).
endelong, adv. along the length of, 416 (a 13th century word which, acc. to N.E.D., was formed by popular etymology to take the place of andlang, the old form of along).

engyn, sb. engine, contrivance, 184 (O. Fr. engin, Lat. ingenium).

entende, v. attend to, 689.

entente, sb. meaning, understanding, intention, 107, 400, 521.

er, adv. ere, before, 460, 468.

er, sb. ear, 196, 316.

esily, adv. easily, 115.

estat, sb. state, 26 (O. Fr. estat, Lat. status).

ever in oon, always alike, 417.

face, sb. astrological face (see note), 50.

fairye, sb. fairyland, 96, 201.

fals, adj. false, 139.

fantasies, sb. pl. fancies, 205.

faste, adv. faste bi, close by, near, 504.

facon, sb. falcon, 411.

feend, sb. enemy, fiend, 522, 602.

feestlych, adj. festive, 281.

felawe, sb. fellow, companion, 216 (O. E. felag; “the primary sense is one who lays down money in a joint undertaking with others,” N.E.D.).

fer, adv. far, 538 (O. E. fear).

ferde, 3 s. pret. fared, behaved, 461, 621.

ferforth, adv. far forward, 567.

fern, adv. of old time, 257 (O. E. fynr).

fern-assen, sb. pl. ashes of fern, 254.

festelynge, pres. part. making festival for, entertaining, 345.

fet, p.p. fetched, 276 (O. E. fetian).

fynally, adv. finally, at last, 309.

fleene, v. to fly, 122; fleeth, 3 s. pres. flies, 149.

flore, sb. pl. flowers, 512.

for, conj. because, 583.

fordyre, adj. very dry, 409.

forfered, p.p. greatly afraid, 527 (the prefix for- gives to an adj. the sense of an absolute superlative, ‘very,’ ‘extremely.’ Cp. Lat. perteritus).

fortunat, adj. fortunate, 25.

fowel, sb. fowl, bird, 149;

free, adj. free-born, noble, 489.

freendly, adj. friendly, 274.

fro, prep. from, 262.

fruyt, sb. fruit, profit, 74.

ful, adv. fully, very, 55, 90.

fulsomnesse, sb. abundance, fullness, 405.

fumositee, sb. vapouriness, 358 (“vapourous humour rising into the head from the stomach,” N.E.D.).

furial, adj. furious, raging, 448.

galpynge, pres. part. gaping, 350, 354 (not found in O. E.; cognate with ylfp).

gan, 3 s. pret. began (used almost as an auxiliary like ‘did’), 262, 348.
gauren, v. to gaze, stare, 190 (possibly a frequentative form of obsolete gau, of same meaning).

geestes, sb. pl. stories 211 (O.Fr. geste, Lat. gesta, acts, achievements).

gentillesse, sb. gentleness, 483.

geten, p.p. gotten, 56.

gyn sb. contrivance, 128, 322 (cp. engyn).

gyse, sb. wise, manner, 332, 540 (Fr. guise).

glade, v. gladden, 634; gladeth, 3 s. pres.

glas, sb. glass, 82, 254.

glood, 3 s. pret. glided, 393.

glose, sb. gloss, explanation, pretence, 166 (Fr. glose, Gr. γλῶσσα).

goodlich, adv. goodly, 623.

goon, v. to go, 364; gooth, 3 s. pres. goes, 267, 277, 302; goon, p.p. gone, 536.

gossomer, sb. gossamer, cobweb, 259 (lit. goose-summer or summer-goose down, which appears in summer).

governaunce, sb. government, management, 311.

greet, adj. great, 13.

greyyn, sb. grain (of dye), 511.

grene, sb. greenness, 54.

grete, adj. great, 306.

hadde, 3 s. pret. had, 208.

halle-dore, sb. hall-door, 80.

halt, 3 s. pres. holds, 61.

han, v. to have, 56; 3 pl. pres. have, 186, 235.

happeth, 3 s. pres. happens, 592.

hardyng, sb. hardening, 243.

heddes, sb. pl. heads, 203, 358.

heed, sb. head, 90, 411.

heele, v. to heal, 240.

heere, v. to hear, 188.

heeste, sb. command, 114.

heigh, heighe, adj. high, 36, 85, 98.

hem, pron. them, 56, 187, 214, 290.

herknynge, pres. part. hearkening, listening to, 78.

heronsewes, sb. pl. young herons, 68 (O.Fr. herounce).

herte, sb. heart, 120, 212 (O.E. heorte).

hertly, adj. hearty, 5 (O.E. heortelich).

hevene, sb. heaven, 149, 271, 558.

hewe, sb. hue, complexion, appearance, 508, 587, 640.

bye, adj. high, 122, 226 (read of E² for maistre), 266, 410; hyer, comp. higher, 387.

bye, v. hurry, 291.

highte, 3 s. pret. was called, 30 (from O.E. haten).

hym, pron. dat. 16.

hir, poss. adj. her, 34; hir, hire, their, 55, 66, 199, 235, 273.

his, gen. s. its, 260.

hit, 3 s. pres. hideth, 512.

holde, p.p. held, considered, 70.

holpe, p.p. helped, 666.

hom, sb. home, to home, 635.

hoold, sb. hold, grasp, 167.

hoote, adj. hot, 51.

hors, sb. horse, 181.

horsly, adj. belonging or proper to a horse, 194.

Idus, sb. gen. s. Ides, the 13th or 15th of the month, 47 (etym. doubtful, see note).

i-knownen, p.p. known, 256.

i-seyd, p.p. said, 601.

jalou8e, adj. jealous, 286 (Low Lat. zelosus, from Gk. ἔλεος; same origin as zealous).
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Word</th>
<th>Definition</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>jangle</td>
<td>3 pl. pres. talk idly, wrangle, 220, 261.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>janglyng</td>
<td>sb. wrangling, idle talking, 258.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>jogelours</td>
<td>sb. pl. jugglers (O.Fr. jogleor, jongelor, Lat. joculator, 219).</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>joly</td>
<td>adj. joyous, 48.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>jolynesse</td>
<td>sb. jollity, mirth, 289.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>jolitee</td>
<td>sb. jollity, mirth, 278, 344.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>juelles</td>
<td>sb. pl. jewels, 341.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>kan</td>
<td>1 s. pres. can, 4.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>keepe</td>
<td>sb. heed, care, 348.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>kembde</td>
<td>3 s. pret. combed, arranged, 560.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>kerve</td>
<td>v. to carve, 158.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>keste</td>
<td>3 s. pret. kissed, 350.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>kynde</td>
<td>sb. nature, 610, 619.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>kitheth</td>
<td>3 s. pres. shows, 483 (O.E. cythan).</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>knyghtes</td>
<td>sb. pl. knights, 69.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>knotte</td>
<td>sb. knot, entanglement, plot, 401, 407.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>knowen</td>
<td>3 pl. pres. know, 235.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>knowynge</td>
<td>sb. knowledge, 301.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>konnen</td>
<td>2 pl. pres. know, 3.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>konnyng</td>
<td>sb. knowledge, ability, 35, 251.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>koude</td>
<td>3 s. pret. could, 97, 240; should know, 39.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>laft</td>
<td>p.p. left, 186, 263.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lakked</td>
<td>3 s. pret. was lacking to, 16.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>large</td>
<td>adj. full, complete, 360.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lay</td>
<td>sb. law, creed, 18 (O.Fr. lei, lai=loi, Lat. lex).</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>ledene</td>
<td>sb. tongue, language, 434, 436, 478 (O.E. leden, Lat. Latinum, the Latin language, and so language in general).</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>leere</td>
<td>3 pl. pres. learn, 104.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>leeste</td>
<td>adj. least, most insignificant, 300.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>leet</td>
<td>3 s. pret. let, caused, 45.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>leeve</td>
<td>adj. beloved, 341 (O.E. leof).</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>leyde</td>
<td>3 s. pret. laid, 313.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>leyser</td>
<td>sb. leisure, 493 (O.Fr. leisir, Lat. licere, to be permitted).</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lenger</td>
<td>adj. comp. longer, 381, 574.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>leste</td>
<td>3 s. pres. it is pleasing to, 125, 380. Cp. list.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lete</td>
<td>1 s. pres. leave, 290, 344.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lettre</td>
<td>sb. letter, 101.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>leve</td>
<td>sb. leave, permission, 363.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>levere</td>
<td>adj. comp. dearer, 572; adv. rather, 683.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lewed</td>
<td>adj. common, vulgar, ignorant, 221.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lewenedesse</td>
<td>sb. ignorance, 223.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lyche</td>
<td>adj. like, 62.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lief</td>
<td>adj. dear, 572.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lige</td>
<td>adj. liege, lawful, 111.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lighte</td>
<td>v. grow light or gay, 396.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lighte</td>
<td>3 s. pres. alights, 169.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lyk</td>
<td>adj. like, 207, 255.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>list</td>
<td>lyst, 3 s. pres. it is pleasing to, 118, 122, 123.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lystes</td>
<td>sb. pl. lists, enclosed space for a tournament, 668 (O.Fr. lisses, Low Lat. liciae, barriers).</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lite</td>
<td>litel, adj. little, 565, 590.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lith</td>
<td>lyth, 3 s. pres. lieth, lies, 322, 474, 35.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lond</td>
<td>sb. land, 69.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>longyage</td>
<td>(for), pres. part. belonging to, 39.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>los</td>
<td>sb. loss, 74.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>loude</td>
<td>adv. loudly, 55.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lowe</td>
<td>adv. softly, 216.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lust</td>
<td>sb. pleasure, 6, 402.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lustiheed</td>
<td>sb. amorous mirth, 288.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lusty</td>
<td>adj. pleasant, 52, 158, 272, 389.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
maad, p.p. made, 222.
maistre, sb. used adjectivally, master, chief, 226 (reading of H1).
maistresse, sb. mistress, duenna, 374 (O.Fr. maistre, master, with fem. suffix -esse).
maken, v. make, 254.
maner, manere, sb. manner, kind of, method, 138, 329, 187.
mansioun, sb. mansion, astrological house, the sign in which the sun or any planet has its special residence, 50.
marbul, sb. marble, 500.
medicynes, sb. pl. medicines, 244.
meynee, sb. train, retinue, 391 (O.Fr. mesnee, as from a Low Lat. mansionata, household; cp. mental).
mente, 3 s. pret. meant, 108.
meridional, adj. southern, 263.
merveille, sb. marvel, 87; mer- valles, pl. 660.
mesurable, adj. temperate, 362.
mete, sb. meat, 70, 173.
mewe, sb. hawk’s cage, 643, 646 (O.Fr. mue, a cage where birds are placed to moult, from verb muer, Lat. mutare, to change).
myn, poss. adj. mine, 37. mynstralaye, sb. minstrelsy, music, 268 (Fr. mnestrel, Lat. ministralis, a servant).
mirour, sb. mirror, 143.
mo, adj. more, 301.
mooste, adj. most, greatest, most important, 199, 300.
moot, I s. pres. must, 41; moote, mooten, 2 pl. pres. 161, 316.
morwe, sb. morn, morrow, 366.
morwenynge, sb. morning, 397.
mooste, 3 s. pres. must, 38, 280.
muchel, adj. much, 349.
namo, no more, 573.
namoore, no more, 314.
nas, ne was, was not, 423.
nat, adv. not, 5, 97, 197.
natheles, nateheles, adv. nevertheless, 253, 395.
nativitee, sb. nativity, birth, 45.
natureel, adj. natural, 116.
naturally, adv. naturally, by natural means, 229.
ze, adv. and conj. not, 86, 97; nor, 68, 197.
near, adv. comp. nearer.
neigh, adj. nigh, near, 49; adv. nearly, 431.
nempne, v. call, name, 318.
newefangel, adj. fond of novelty, ready to seize (O.E. fange)n what is new, 618.
newefangelnesse, sb. fondness of novelty, 610.
nyce, adj. foolish, 525 (O.F. nice, Lat. nescius, ignorant) yn, ne in, nor in, 35.
yis, ne is, is not, 72, 255, 359.
yreste, 3 pl. pret. ne wiste, knew not, 502, 634.
nobleye, sb. nobility, dignity, state, 77.
nolde, ne wolde, would not, 421.
noon, adj. none, 41.
noot, ne woot, know not, 342.
norice, sb. nurse, 347 (Fr. nourice, Lat. nutrix).
novelies, sb. pl. novelties, 619 (O.Fr. novelrie).
novellerie, adv. phrase, from time to time, 430.
o, num. adj. one, 116, 581.
obesaincyne, sb. obeisance, marks of respect, submissiveness, 93, 562.
ook, sb. oak, 159.
oon, num. adj. one, 212.
operacioun, sb. operation, task, 130.
ordeneyned, p.p. ordained, 177.
ordre, sb. order, 62, 92.
outher, conj. either, 420, 455.
over, prep. besides, 137.
pace, v. pass, go, 120; 1 s. pres. subj. pass away, 494.
paleys, sb. palace, 60.
parements, sb. pl. rich array, decorations (O.Fr. parement, Low Lat. paramentum, 269).
pas, sb. pace, a pas, at a foot pace, 388.
passe of, pass over, 288 (var.).
peynes, sb. pl. pains, 480.
pitouss, adj. piteous, 412.
pitously, adv. piteously, 414.
plat, sb. flat side, 162.
platte, adj. flat, 164 (Fr. plat, Ger. platt).
pleye, v. play, 78; pleyen, 3 pl. pres. 219.
pellyn, adv. plainly, 151.
plesance, sb. pleasant manners, 509 (O.Fr. plaisance, Low Lat. placentia).
Poilleys, adj. Apulian, 195. point-devys, at, carefully, to, a nicety, 560.
polyve, sb. pulley, 184.
prees, sb. press, crowd, 189.
preyede, 3 s. pret. prayed, 311.
presentes, sb. pl. gifts, 174.
preved, p.p. proved, 481.
prighte, 3 s. pret. pricked, 418.
pryyme, sb. the first hour or first quarter of the day, so the time between 6 and 9 a.m., 73;
pryme large, full prime, 9 o'clock.
privee, adj. privy, secret, 531.
proces, sb. process, course, 658.
prolixitee, sb. prolixity, long-windedness, 405.
propre, adj. proper, 619.
prospectives, sb. pl. perspective glasses, telescopes, 234.
purs, sb. purse, 148.
queynte, adj. curious, 234, 239, 360 (O.Fr. coint. Lat. cognitus).
quyk, adj. quick, lively, 194 (O.E. cwie).
quod, 3 s. pret. quoth, said, 212, 449.
ravysshed, p.p. carried away, 547.
rebelle, v. rebell, 5.
recche, 3 pl. pres. think, consider, 71.
recours, sb. recourse, return, 75.
rede, adj. red, 415.
rede, v. read, 211.
redy, adj. 114.
reflexions, sb. pl. reflections, 230.
regioun, sb. region, land, 14.
regne, sb. kingdom, 135 (Lat. regnum).
rehercen, v. rehearse, relate, 298.
reyne, sb. rein, 313.
renewed, p.p. removed, 181 (Fr. remuer).
renmeth, 3 s. pres. runs, 479.
renoun, sb. renown, fair fame, 13, 530.
repaire, v. repair, come to, 589;
repeireth, 3 s. pres. 339;
repeirynge, pres. part. 608.
reson, sb. reason, cause, 296.
resounded, 3 s. pret. resounded, 413.
rethor, sb. master of rhetoric, 38.
ryche, adj. rich, 61.
GLOSSARY

richely, adv. richly, 90.
right, adv. thoroughly, 215.
roche, sb. rock, 500 (Fr. roche).
rody, adj. ruddy, rosy, 385, 394.
roial, adj. royal, 26, 264.
roos, 3 s. pret. rose, 266.
route, sb. assembly, procession, 303, 382 (O.Fr. route, Low Lat. rota, rapta).
routhe, sb. ruth, pity, 438.
rrowned, 3 s. pret. rounded, whispered, 216 (O.E. rúnian; for the later addition of d, cp. sound and sound).

saleweth, 3 s. pres. salutes, 91, 112 (Fr. saluer, Lat. saluare).
saugh, 1 s. pret. saw, 400.
save, prep. except, 90 (Fr. sauf, Lat. salus).
secte, sb. sect, school of religion, 17.
seel, sb. seal, 131 (O.Fr. seel, Lat. sigillum).
seen, v. see, 303, 513.
sege, sb. siege, 306.
sey, 1 s. pres. say, 289; 2 s. imper. 2; seiden, seyden, 3 pl. pret. 231, 253; seyn, 3 pl. pret. 252; seyn, inf. to say, 117, 163, 314, 434; seith, 3 s. pres. 99 (var.).
semblant, sb. appearance, 516.
semed, 3 s. pret. it seemed to, 56.
served, 3 s. pret. preserved, concealed, 521.
servysé, sb. service, 66, 280.
seesoun, sb. season, 54, 389, 397.
seten, 3 pl. pres. sit, 92.
seuretee, sb. surety, assurance, 528 (O.Fr. seurté, Lat. securitas).
sewes, sb. pl. dishes, 67 (O.E. scavu).
shapen, 3 pl. pres. dispose, 214.
shene, adj. bright, 53 (O.E. scéne, Ger. schön).
sholde, 3 s. should, 102, 245.
shoon, 3 s. pret. shone, 170.
shoures, sb. pl. showers, 118.
shrighte, 3 s. pret. from schrichen, shrieked, 417, 422.
shul, 3 s. shall, 357.
syde, sb. side, 84.
signe, sb. astrological sign (see note), 51.
syk, sb. sigh, 498 (O.E. sican, to sigh).
sikerly, adv. surely, assuredly, 180 (Lat. secunus).
silable, sb. syllable, 101 (O.Fr. sillable, sillabe, Gk. συλλαβή).
The last l is excrescent.
similitude, sb. likeness, 480.
syn, adv. since, 306, 457.
sit, 3 s. pres. sits, 77, 179.
skiles, sb. pl. reasons, arguments, 205 (O. Norse, skil).
sle, 2 pl. pres. slay, 462 (O.E. sleán, to kill).
slye, adj. clever, 230 (O. Norse, slegr).
smerle, adj. smart, pricking, 480.
smerle, 3 s. pres. subj. hurt, 564.
sodeynly, adv. suddenly, 80, 89, 625.
solempne, adj. solemn, famous, 61, 111.
solempnely, adv. solemnly, 179.
som, pl. some, 213.
someres, sb. gen. summer’s, 64, 142.
sondry, adv. sundry, various, 220, 243.
sones, sb. pl. sons, 29.
songen, 3 pl. pret. sang, 55.
sonne, sb. sun, 53, 385.
soure, v. soar, 123.
soure, adv. sorely, 258.
sotte, adj. sweet, 389.
sooth, adj. true, 21.
soper, sb. supper, 290.
sophymes, sb. pl. sophisms, delusions, 554 (Gk. σοφίαμα).
sorwe, sb. sorrow, 422.
sorwful, adj. sorrowful, 585.
soupen, 3 pl. pres. sup, 297.
sowne, v. sound, 105; sownen, 3 pl. pres. 270; sowneth into, 3 pl. belong to, 517 (Lat. sonare).
speche, sb. speech, oratory, 94, 104.
specke, spoken, 3 pl. pres. speak, 247, 232, 243.
sphere, sb. spear, 239.
stant, 3 s. pres. stands, 171, 182, 316.
stevene, sb. voice, speech, 150 (O.E. stefn).
stil, sb. style, method of speaking or writing, 105 (Lat. stilus).
style, sb. stepping-place over a fence, 106 (O.E. stigel).
style, sb. step, 291 (lit. warden or keeper of a sty).
stondeth, 3 s. pres. stands, 190.
ston, sb. stone, 171.
straw, 2 s. pres. subj. strew, 613.
stroke, sb. stroke, 160.
subtiltee, sb. subtlety, craft, 140 (Lat. subtilitas).
swannes, sb. pl. swans, 68.
swerd, sb. sword, 57.
swich, adj. such, 27, 41, 157, 215.
swowneth, 3 s. pres. swoons, faints, 430.

thane, adv. then, 64.
tharray, the array, 63.
theffect, the effect, the effectual part, 322.
thennes, adv. thence, 326.
ther, adv. where, 179.
ther as, adv. where, 267, 270, 306.
ther-inne, adv. therein, 213.
ther-with, adv. therewith, thereto, moreover, 194.
therwithal, adv. thereto, in addition, 244.
thilke, adj. thick, 159.
thilke, the ilk, the same, 162, 607.
thynges, sb. pl. musical compositions, 78 (see note).
thise, dem. pron. pl. these, 211.
theo, adv. then, 308.
thumb, sb. thumb, 83.
thunder, sb. thunder, 258.
thoughte, 3 s. pret. it seemed to, 527.
thridde, adj. third, 76.
thurgh, prep. through, 11, 121.
thurghout, prep. throughout, 158.
tyde, sb. tide, season, 142.
tidives, sb. pl. small birds, 648.
til, adv. till, 269.
to, adv. too, 525.
toform, prep. before, 268.
tonge, sb. tongue, 35.
tour, sb. tower, 176 (Fr. tour, Lat. turris).
trench, sb. cutting, 392.
tresoun, sb. treason, 139 (O. Fr. traizon, Lat. acc. traditionem).
trete, 3 pl. pres. discuss, 219.
trille, v. turn, twist, 316; 2 s. imperat. 321, 328.
trippe, v. trip, skip, 312.
trone, sb. throne, 275.
trowe, 1 s. pres. trow, believe, 213.
GLOSSARY

twynne, v. depart, 577.
twiste, sb. branch, 442.
twiste, v. twist, wring, 566.

unbokele, v. unbuckle, 555.
understonde, p.p. understood, 437.
unfeestlich, adv. unfestive, 366.
unknowe, adj. unknown, 246.
unkouthe, adj. strange, unknown, 284.

veluettes, sb. pl. velvets, 644.
verray, adj. true, genuine, 166.
verraily, adv. verily, truly, 466.

verte, sb. branch, 442.

vestiment, sb. array, clothing, 59.

vice, sb. fault, 101.

voyden, v. remove, 188.
voys, sb. voice, 99, 412.

wayten, v. await, watch, 443; 3 pl. pres. 88; wayted, 3 s. pret. watched.

wan, 3 s. pret. won, 662, 664.

weder, sb. weather, 52.

weel, adv. well, 115.

welle, sb. well, fountain, 505.
wem, sb. spot, blemish, 121.
wend, p.p. thought, 510; wende, 3 pl. pret. 198.
wende, 3 pl. pres. go, 296; went, p.p. 567.

wynter, pi. winters, 43.

wynter, pl. winters, 43.
wys, adj. wise, 559.

witzel, sb. manner, 521.

wisly, adv. surely, certainly, 469.
wyst, p.p. wist, known, 260; wiste, 3 s. pret. knew, 399.

withouten, prep. without, 121, 180.
nittiles, sb. pl. wits, 293.

woode, sb. wood, 413.
wol, 1 s. pres. will, 4.
wolde, 3 s. would, 237.

wonder, adj. wondrous, 248, 254.
wondered, 3 pl. pret. wondered, 307.
wondren, 3 pl. pres. wonder, 258.
wondryng, verb. sub. wondering, 305, 308.

woot, 3 s. sub. knows, 299; 2 pl. pres. 519.

wopen, p.p. wept, 523.
wreke, 2 pl. pres. avenge, 454.

wrenen, 3 pl. pret. wrote, 233.

wroghte, 3 s. pret. wrought, made, 128.

yaf, 1 s. pret. gave, 533; 3 s. pres. 542.

y-drawe, p.p. drawn, 326.
yeve, 2 s. pres. subj. give, 614.
yeven, p.p. given, 541.
y-fynde, v. find, 470.
y-glewed, p.p. glued, fastened, 182.
y-goon, p.p. gone, 293, 538.
yliche, adj. alike, 20.
y-maad, p.p. made, 218.
ynowe, adj. enough, 470.
yong, yonge, adj. young, 23, 55, 385; yonge, pl. young people, 88; yongest, sup. 33.
yoore, adv. a long time, 403.
yow, pron. you, 73.
ypocrite, sb. hypocrite, 520.
y-quit, p.p. acquitted, 673.
y-swore, p.p. sworn, 325.
y-toold, p.p. told, 357.
MACMILLAN'S
ENGLISH CLASSICS:
A SERIES OF SELECTIONS FROM THE WORKS OF THE GREAT ENGLISH WRITERS, WITH INTRODUCTION AND NOTES.
The following Volumes, Globe 8vo, are ready or in preparation.

ADDISON—Selections from the Spectator. By K. Deighton. 2s. 6d.

ADDISON AND STEELE—Coverley Papers from the Spectator. Edited by K. Deighton. 1s. 9d.

ARNOLD—Selections. By G. C. Macaulay. 2s. 6d.

BACON—Essays. By F. G. Selby, M.A. 3s.; sewed, 2s. 6d.

The Schoolmaster—"A handy and serviceable edition of a famous English classical work, one that can never lose its freshness and its truth."

—The Advancement of Learning. By F. G. Selby, M.A. Book I., 2s.; Book II., 4s. 6d.

BUNYAN—The Pilgrim's Progress. Edited by John Morrison, M.A. 1s. 9d.; sewed, 1s. 6d.

Scotsman—"Contains many notes which will make the book valuable beyond the circle to which it is immediately addressed."

Schoolmaster—"A very good book whether for examination or for independent reading and study."

Glasgow Herald—"The book is remarkably well edited."

—Speeches on American Taxation; on Conciliation with America; Letter to the Sheriffs of Bristol. By F. G. Selby, M.A. 3s. 6d.

BYRON—Childe Harold. Edited by Edward E. Morris, M.A. [In the Press.

CAMPBELL—Selections. By W. T. Webb, M.A. [In the Press.

CHAUCER—Selections from Canterbury Tales. By H. Corson. 4s. 6d.

CHosen ENGLISH—Selections from Wordsworth, Byron, Shelley, Lamb, and Scott. With short biographies and notes by A. Ellis, B.A. 2s. 6d.

COWPER—The Task, Book IV. By W. T. Webb, M.A. Sewed, 1s. Letters, Selections from. By W. T. Webb, M.A. 2s. 6d.

—Shorter Poems. Edited by W. T. Webb, M.A. 2s. 6d.

DRYDEN—Select Satires—Absalom and Achitophel; The Medal; Mac Flecknoe. By J. Churton Collins, M.A. 1s. 9d.

GOLDSMITH—The Traveller and The Deserted Village. By Arthur Barrett, B.A. 1s. 9d. The Traveller (separately), sewed, 1s. The Deserted Village (separately), sewed, 1s.

—Vicar of Wakefield. By Michael Macmillan, B.A. 2s. 6d.

The Scotsman—"It has a short critical and biographical introduction, and a very full series of capital notes."

MACMILLAN AND CO., LIMITED, LONDON.
GRAY—Poems. By John Bradshaw, LL.D. 1s. 9d.
Dublin Evening Mail—"The Introduction and Notes are all that can be desired. We believe that this will rightly become the standard school edition of Gray."
Schoolmaster—"One of the best school editions of Gray's poems we have seen."

HELPS—Essays Written in the Intervals of Business.
By F. J. Rowe, M.A., and W. T. Webb, M.A. 1s. 9d.
The Literary World—"These essays are, indeed, too good to be forgotten."
The Guardian—"A welcome addition to our school classics. The introduction, though brief, is full of point."

JOHNSON—Life of Milton. By K. Deighton. 1s. 9d.
—Life of Dryden. By P. Peterson. [In the Press.
—Life of Pope. By P. Peterson. [In the Press.

LAMB—The Essays of Elia. First Series. Edited by N. L.
Hallward, M.A., and S. C. Hill, B.A. 3s.; sewed, 2s. 6d.

LONGFELLOW—Courtship of Miles Standish. By W. Elliot,
M.A. 1s.

MACAULAY—Lays of Ancient Rome. Edited by W. T. Webb, M.A.
—Essay on Addison. By J. W. Hales, M.A. [In the Press.
—Essay on Warren Hastings. Ed. by K. Deighton. 2s. 6d.
—Lord Clive. Edited by K. Deighton. 2s.
—Essay on Boswell's Life of Johnson. Edited by R. F.
Winch, M.A. 2s. 6d.

MALORY—Morte d'Arthur. Edited by A. T. Martin, M.A.
2s. 6d.

MILTON—Paradise Lost, Books I. and II. By Michael Macmillan, B.A. 1s. 9d. Books I.-IV. separately, 1s. 3d.
each; sewed, 1s. each.
The Times of India—"The notes of course occupy the editor's chief attention, and form the most valuable part of the volume. They are clear, concise, and to the point, . . . while at the same time they are simple enough for the comprehension of students to whom Milton without annotation must needs be a mystery."
The Schoolmaster—"The volume is admirably adapted for use in upper classes of English Schools."
The Educational News—"For higher classes there can be no better book for reading, analysis, and grammar, and the issue of these books of Paradise Lost must be regarded as a great inducement to teachers to introduce higher literature into their classes."

—L’Allegro, Il Penseroso, Lycidas, Arcades, Sonnets, &c.
By William Bell, M.A. 1s. 9d.
The Glasgow Herald—"A careful study of this book will be as educative as that of any of our best critics on Aeschylus or Sophocles."
—Comus. By the same. 1s. 3d.; sewed, 1s.
The Dublin Evening Mail—"The introduction is well done, and contains much sound criticism."
The Practical Teacher—"The notes include everything a student could reasonably desire in the way of the elucidations of the text, and at the same time are presented in so clear and distinct a fashion, that they are likely to attract the reader instead of repelling him."
—Samson Agonistes. By H. M. Percival, M.A. 2s.
The Guardian—"His notes are always of real literary value. . . . His introduction is equally masterly, and touches all that can be said about the poem."

MILTON—Tractate of Education. By E. E. Morris, M.A.
1s. 9d.

MACMILLAN AND CO., LIMITED, LONDON.
PALGRAVE—Golden Treasury of Songs and Lyrics. Book Second. By W. Bell, M.A. 3s. 6d.

POEMS OF ENGLAND. A Selection of English Patriotic Poetry, with notes by Hereford B. George, M.A., and Arthur Sidgwick, M.A. 2s. 6d.

POPE—Essay on Man. Epistles I.-IV. Edited by Edward E. Morris, M.A. 1s. 9d.
—Essay on Criticism. Edited by J. C. Collins, M.A. 1s. 9d.

SCOTT—The Lady of the Lake. By G. H. Stuart, M.A. 2s. 6d.; sewed, 2s. Canto I., sewed, 9d.
—The Lay of the Last Minstrel. By G. H. Stuart, M.A., and E. H. Elliot, B.A. 2s. Canto I., sewed, 9d. Cantos I.-III., and IV.-VI., 1s. 3d. each; sewed, 1s. each.

The Journal of Education—"The text is well printed, and the notes, wherever we have tested them, have proved at once scholarly and simple."

—Marmion. By Michael Macmillan, B.A. 3s.; sewed, 2s. 6d.

The Spectator—"... His introduction is admirable, alike for point and brevity."

The Indian Daily News—"The present volume contains the poem in 200 pages, with more than 100 pages of notes, which seem to meet every possible difficulty."

—Rokeby. By the same. 3s.; sewed, 2s. 6d.

The Guardian—"The introduction is excellent, and the notes show much care and research."

SHAKESPEARE—The Tempest. By K. Deighton. 1s. 9d.

The Guardian—"Speaking generally of Macmillan's Series we may say that they approach more nearly than any other edition we know to the ideal school Shakespeare. The introductory remarks are not too much burdened with controversial matter; the notes are abundant and to the point, scarcely any difficulty being passed over without some explanation, either by a paraphrase or by etymological and grammatical notes."

—Much Ado About Nothing. By the same. 2s.

The Schoolmaster—"The notes on words and phrases are full and clear."

—A Midsummer-Night's Dream. By the same. 1s. 9d.

—The Merchant of Venice. By the same. 1s. 9d.

—As You Like It. By the same. 1s. 9d.

—Twelfth Night. By the same. 1s. 9d.

The Educational News—"This is an excellent edition of a good play."

—The Winter's Tale. By the same. 2s.

—King John. By the same. 1s. 9d.

—Richard II. By the same. 1s. 9d.

—Henry IV., Part I. By the same. 2s. 6d.; sewed, 2s.

—Henry IV., Part II. By the same. 2s. 6d.; sewed, 2s.

—Henry V. By the same. 1s. 9d.

—Richard III. By C. H. Tawney, M.A. 2s. 6d.; sewed, 2s.

The School Guardian—"Of Mr. Tawney's work as an annotator we can speak in terms of commendation. His notes are full and always to the point."

—Henry VIII. By K. Deighton. 1s. 9d.

MACMILLAN AND CO., LIMITED, LONDON.
SHAKESPEARE—Coriolanus. By K. Deighton. 2s. 6d.; sewed, 2s.

—Romeo and Juliet. By the same. 2s. 6d.; sewed, 2s.

—Julius Caesar. By the same. 1s. 9d.

—Macbeth. By the same. 1s. 9d.

The Educational Review—"This is an excellent edition for the student. The notes are suggestive, . . . and the vivid character sketches of Macbeth and Lady Macbeth are excellent."

—Hamlet. By the same. 2s. 6d.; sewed, 2s.

—King Lear. By the same. 1s. 9d.

—Othello. By the same. 2s.

—Antony and Cleopatra. By the same. 2s. 6d.; sewed, 2s.

—Cymbeline. By the same. 2s. 6d.; sewed, 2s.

The Scotsman—"Mr. Deighton has adapted his commentary, both in Othello and in Cymbeline, with great skill to the requirements and capacities of the readers to whom the series is addressed."

SOUTHEY—Life of Nelson. By Michael Macmillan, B.A. 3s.; sewed, 2s. 6d.

SPENSER—The Faerie Queene. Book I. By H. M. Percival, M.A. 3s.; sewed, 2s. 6d.

—The Shepheard's Calender. By C. H. Herford, Litt.D. 2s. 6d.

STEELE—Selections. By L. E. Steele, M.A. 2s.

The Journal of Education—"It should find a wide circulation in English schools. . . . The notes give just the requisite amount of help for understanding Tennyson, explanations of the allusions with which his poems teem, and illustrations by means of parallel passages. A short critical introduction gives the salient features of his style with apt examples."

The Literary World—"The book is very complete, and will be a good introduction to the study of Tennyson's works generally."

—Morte d'Arthur. By the same. Sewed, 1s.

—The Coming of Arthur; The Passing of Arthur. By F. J. Rowe, M.A. 2s. 6d.

—Enoch Arden. By W. T. Webb, M.A. 2s. 6d.

—Aylmer's Field. By W. T. Webb, M.A. 2s. 6d.

—The Princess. By P. M. Wallace, M.A. 3s. 6d.

—Gareth and Lynette. By G. C. Macaulay, M.A. 2s. 6d.

—The Marriage of Geraint; Geraint and Enid. By G. C. Macaulay, M.A. 2s. 6d.

—The Holy Grail. By G. C. Macaulay, M.A. 2s. 6d.

—Lancelot and Elaine. By F. J. Rowe, M.A. 2s. 6d.

—Guinevere. By G. C. Macaulay, M.A. 2s. 6d.

WORDSWORTH—Selections. By W. T. Webb, M.A. 2s. 6d.; also in two parts, 1s. 9d. each.

MACMILLAN AND CO., LIMITED, LONDON.

20.1.98.
Chaucer, Geoffrey
Chaucer's Canterbury tales

PR 1868 S6P6 1899